Volume XI

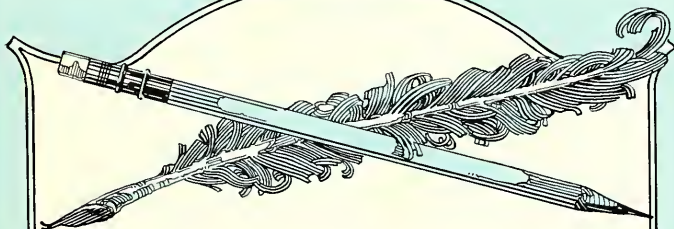

Foreword

IN handing this eleventh volume of the year book of the Medical College of Virginia to their Student Body the Staff of the X-Ray feels nothing of regret, prays no forgiveness, asks no quarter. It does so with the full assurance of an obligation justly met and consoles its inadequate attempt with a somewhat selfish feeling that it represents the best that was in them. Angels can do no more. We have attempted to perpetuate the spirit of the year books that have gone before. We have attempted to commemorate something of the priceless moments that you all have known so well. To what extent we have missed or exceeded the mark you alone shall be the judges. We long now for the gladness of the spring, seen with a vision of all that is true and beautiful, opens before us like the vista of a new day. If these pages portray to you somewhat of the memories that you have known, if in the years that lie before you a single dream of gladness about the old Medical College of Virginia is returned, we shall feel like that one who wraps the draperies of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

"CELEBRITIES"

IN AND AROUND THE COLLEGE

Greater M. C. V.

*Time has wrought a graphic picture
For the Sons of M. C. V.,
Of tradition and of honor,
Of a Spirit grand to see,
Of the men who went before us
From this grand old institute,
And who took ideals with them—
Alma Mater's attribute.*

*O Time, that knows no bridle,
Leave a memory of this age
From this portion of Life's album
Tear the essence of a page;
Grant us just a recollection
Of the Golden Age of Youth;
Let us keep the hallowed memory
Of our lessons learnt of truth.*

*Through the years that are to follow
Comes a vision clear defined,
Of a rising tide of manhood
'Neath Virginia's sky enshrined;
May they prosper by our failures
And their errors smaller be,
Make their ideals fit their usage,
Make a greater M. C. V.*

"The Anatomist"

Through the courtesy of Dr. John W. Brodnax, the Artist, Sculptor, Professor of Anatomy, and the friend to every student, by whom he is affectionately referred to as the "Immortal Brodie."

"Peyton"

Dr. Brodnax has reproduced from life this picture of one who plays a major role in the drama enacted in the Anatomy Hall. "Peyton" is here shown in his characteristic position, surrounded by bones and cats, preparing for the next avalanche of Freshmen.

To the Seniors

*"Who works from morn till set of sun,
The whole day long is on the run,
And yet whose work is never done?
The Doctor.*

*"Who's 'roused up in the dead of night
By someone in a dreadful fright,
Who's sure she's going to die outright?
The Doctor.*

*"Who, when the days are shocking hot,
Can seek no cool, sequestered spot,
Because he must be on the trot?
The Doctor.*

*"Who, when the mercury is low,
Long weary miles must often go,
Through cutting winds and blinding snow?
The Doctor.*

*"Who has to hear the countless ills,
And deal out multitudes of pills
To those who never pay their bills?
The Doctor.*

*"Who must not show that it's a bore
To hear each family history o'er
Five generations back and more?
The Doctor.*

*"Who should be placed among the saints,
Whom history with us acquaints,
For patient listening to complaints?
The Doctor."*

Senior Medical Class

JOHN BERNARD AHOUSE, $K \Psi, \Phi \Sigma N$ New Milton, W. Va.

Matriculated 1923; West Virginia Club; Cotillion Club; Honor Council.

"My dear boys, it's time to get up."

"Johnny" comes to us from the hills of West Virginia, and represents a finished mountaineer product. Having taken a B.S. at the University of West Virginia and his first two years in Medicine, he elected to complete his education in this renowned institution. Love, anger, and worry are three words always present in "Johnny's" dictionary. Love for the one woman, anger because of too much work, and worry because of too little work.

Those of us who know "Johnny" will heartily agree that he is a man worth knowing. Straight as an arrow, and with a personality that will always attract. In short, he is simply a diligent, energetic, and sincere man and a loyal friend, who will stick to the end. When in the days to come we examine the list, we are sure to find the name of John B. Ahouse among those in the "Hall of Fame." With his going he leaves behind a host of friends, all of whom know that with his determination and zeal the world holds no fear for him.

"In spite of all the learned have said,
I still my own opinion keep."

HADDON CHRISTOPHER ALEXANDER, JR., $\Phi X, K \Sigma$ Tunstall, Va.

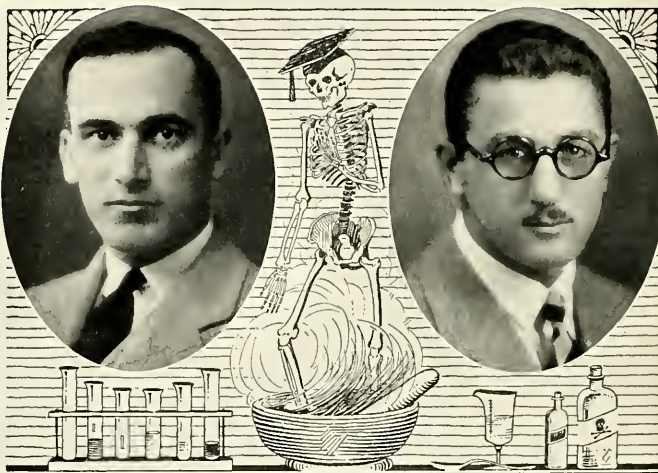

Matriculated 1921; Captain Baseball; Intern Sheltering Arms Hospital.

"I'll swear I don't know."

"Alex" first saw the light a few years ago down in old Hanover. His early days were busily occupied on that greatest of all places, the farm, and it was there that he laid the foundation for his later stability of character. Quite early his ambition caused him to leave his childhood scenes and begin the rough journey towards an M.D. Cluster Springs Academy and Hampden-Sydney College seemed as stepping stones to bring him to us, and while at these institutions he became noted as a star southpaw twirler, as well as a clean, honest and industrious student. Since coming to us, "Alex" had continued to show all of these attributes and, in addition, he possesses enough reserve and dignity to inspire confidence in everyone with whom he is associated. Although his in-born reserve and his quiet unobtrusive manner may act as a screen to strangers, we who know him regard him as a friend of the truest type, a gentleman of the highest caliber, and, above all, a man of the robust principles. He has clearly proven the fact that "you can't keep a good man down."

We are proud to have been associated with you, "Alex," old boy, and we know full well that you've got the "stuff," so here's hoping that the unfolding years may bring to you all the happiness and success that you so richly deserve.

"A proper man as one shall see in a summer's day."

Senior Medical Class

ELDON ANDREW AMICK, $\Phi B \Pi$, $\Phi K \Psi$, $\Phi \Sigma \chi$, $Z \Delta X$. . . Charleston, W. Va.

Matriculated 1923; Editor-in-Chief "X-Ray"; West Virginia Club; Washington and Lee Club; Cotillion Club; B.S. West Virginia University; Ph.G. Medical College of Va.

"How about it, boys, did I get a letter?"

The good looking, black-haired "Romeo" pictured here is none other than "Andy" Amick, who hails from the hills of West Virginia and bears the earmarks of a true "mountaineer." He is our editor, and has demonstrated the "go get it" all along; with endurance, foresight, strength, and skill he has done honor to himself and won an everlasting gratitude from his classmates. His ready smile and sunny disposition have won for him many friends. How he manages to do so many nice things for so many people in such a small amount of time we are yet to discover. Cupid's guerrilla warfare is at an end—the elusive "Andy" after dodging many love darts, has at last fallen by the wayside and deserted the Bachelors' Club.

He has chosen Pediatrics as his specialty and, with a personality such as he possesses, great will be his renown among the mothers and little ones.

"He makes no friend who never made a foe."

MAURICE BRUCE BANGEL, $\Phi \Delta E$ Portsmouth, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Secretary-Treasurer Junior and Senior Classes; Square and Compass; University of Virginia Club; Class Basketball Team.

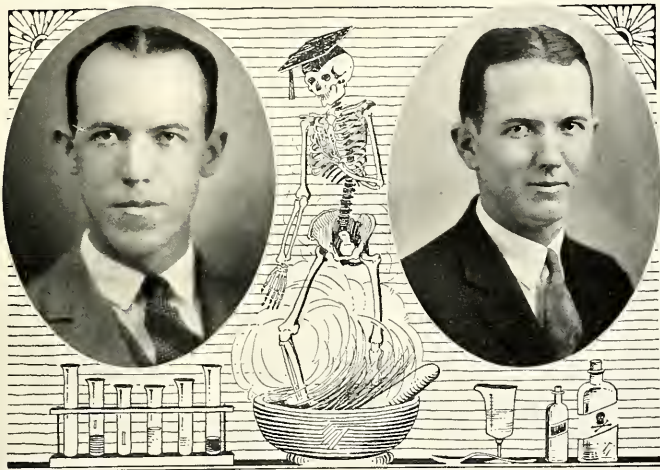

"Wish you men would pay up."

Maurice comes to us from Portsmouth, Va., after winning his laurels in athletics at the University of Virginia, having been a member of the varsity wrestling team. He has shown himself to be a good all-round athlete, being a member of the basketball team and participating in all other forms of athletics. As a scholar, Maurice stands well in his class, and has shown that rare ability to think for himself as well as to make use of the textbooks. The feature that makes Maurice stand out in his class is that combination of ability, accomplishment, and modesty.

When it comes to the ladies, you have struck his strong point, for he is always one of the sides of the "eternal triangle"; and it is hard for us fellows to determine who compose the other two sides.

Maurice, with his pleasant smile, personal neatness, ever seeking after knowledge, and determination, insures for himself success in whatever line he chooses to take as his life's work. Good luck, Maurice.

"Of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honor clear."

Senior Medical Class

DEMPSEY BARNES, $\Phi P \Sigma$ Proctorville, N. C.

Matriculated 1923; B.A. Degree Wake Forest College; Carolina Club.

"I'll be dogged if it ain't."

After taking two years' work in Medicine at Wake Forest College, Dempsey wandered from the Old North State to the Medical College of Virginia to complete his medical education. The juniors were very fortunate in having Dempsey join them, for few have taken greater interest in the work and applied themselves as well. He is very quiet and reserved, but in spite of this he was soon well known and respected by all the members of his class. When he goes about his work in his quiet, pleasing manner, everyone has the assurance that the work will be done properly. He has proven a good subject for physical diagnosis clinic, for, as Dr. Nelson says, "He is from a low, flat country, and takes very little exercise." Judging from the way he heads his car towards Main Street every afternoon at five o'clock, he is quite a favorite among the fairer sex. When Dempsey goes back to North Carolina, he will make good in his chosen profession, and will be a credit to the Medical College of Virginia.

"Charms strike the sight,
But merit wins the soul."

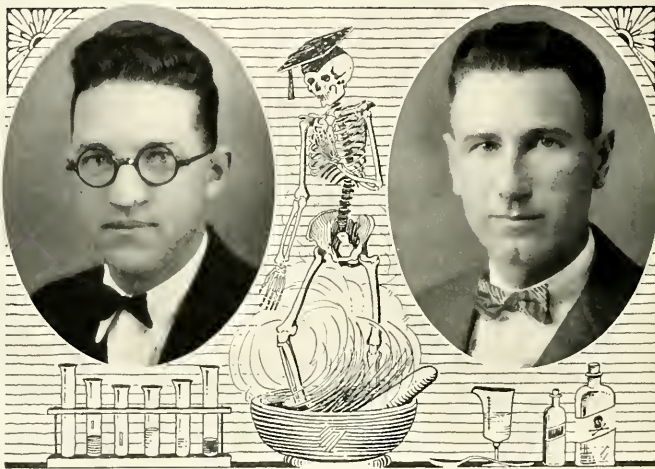

TIFFANY BARNES, $\Phi P \Sigma$ Proctorville, N. C.

Matriculated 1923; A.B. Wake Forest College.

"O shucks!"

"Tiff," not being satisfied with a host of friends at Wake Forest College, where he took his first two years of Medicine, came to the Medical College of Virginia, in 1923, to acquire more friends and complete his medical course. His smiling countenance and winning personality soon enhanced the members of the Junior Class, and he is now one of the best known additions to the class. He has a pleasant smile for everybody and never shirks his duties, even in doing the routine laboratory work in Medicine. He loves the ladies, too, as is indicated by the fact that he often leaves an interesting demonstration in dispensary to cast woeing eyes at the ladies on Broad Street. He is quite a "Doc," for he prescribes sodium bromide and spirits of fermenti to the patients of the Convalescent Home on Third Street. We expect to hear great things from "Tiff" when he begins practicing his healing art on the suffering.

"Where his heart is, there his 'treasure' is also."

Senior Medical Class

WAYLON BLUE, $\Phi P \Sigma$, $K A$ Carthage, N. C.

Matriculated 1921; President Junior Class; President Athletic Association; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet; Varsity Tennis; North Carolina Club; Athletic Editor for "Skull and Bones"; Interns Hygeia Hospital.

"Any mail?"

Neither "Blue" nor "Old Lady" expresses his mood. He is nearer the opposite, regardless of environment. He wandered from the Old North State to Bethany, W. Va., where he obtained his pre-medical course, and as it was too cool there he came to the Medical College of Virginia to complete his medical work. Not a member of our class was sooner known, both in and out of the class, than "Blue." He inspires a feeling of respect and confidence in the hearts of all who know him. It is through his efficiency as a student and his charming personality that we boast for him a successful career in his chosen profession.

"If music be love, play on, fair nymphs."

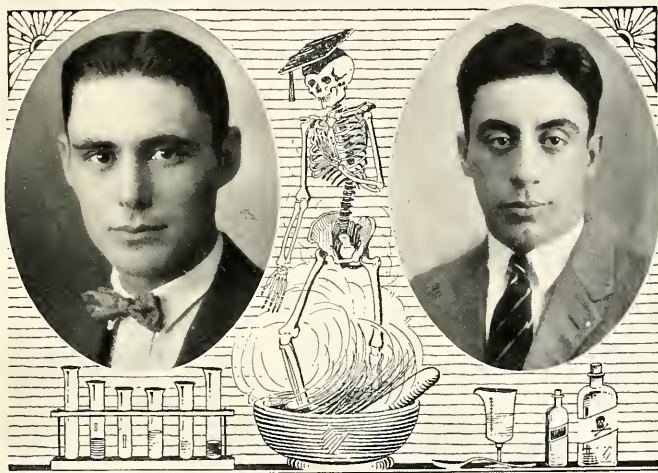

GEORGE WYTHE BOOTH, $\Phi P \Sigma$, $\Sigma \Phi E$ Richmond, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Honor Council, '21-'22; Vice-President Class, '22-'23; Interns Confederate Soldiers' Home, Richmond, Va.

"When I was a young man,"

When we search for reasons for the well-rounded man, George, we find he had learned his lessons in the greatest of all schools, life. During the war, he did research work in war gases. He has served as professor in Roanoke High School, and was principal of two other high schools, and to this experience is added that of husband and fatherhood. In making a resume of his life to this time, we have the addition for his angelic disposition—sympathy and a true friendliness to all—and one is not surprised that the class values his opinion. He bears the distinction of not having missed a lecture nor been late to a class. If George is as loyal to M. C. V. as he is to his other Alma Mater, William and Mary College, then this college can boast of no more loyal son. We are grateful for having known him, and are sure that the future holds for him unlimited success.

"The reason firm, the tempered will,
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill."

Senior Medical Class

BENNIE HAYES BRADFORD, $\Phi P \Sigma$ Oxford, N. C.

Matriculated 1921; Cotillion Club; North Carolina Club.

"O Gee! What am I going to do?"

Bennie is very quiet. He possesses that quality of being a good listener, who says little but does much. His quiet but genial friendliness has won for him many friends. His first two years were spent in hard study, much worry, and an occasional shy glance through the field glasses at Richmond's nocturnal skyline. It was during these two years that observation of this young man led to the discovery of a disease now well known to the medical world as "Bradford's Disease," characterized by intense worry, amnesia, nervousness, irritableness, hair pulling, walking to and fro with hands clasped. At the same time he instituted the treatment, consisting of getting his hat, cashing a check, and leaving for parts unknown.

When Bennie successfully passed his first two years' work, he looked around for other tasks and, finding them light, he decided to launch his ship upon the social sea, where he also encountered much success.

"Still water runs deep."

HAROLD CHARLES BRINN, $\Phi \Delta E$ New York City

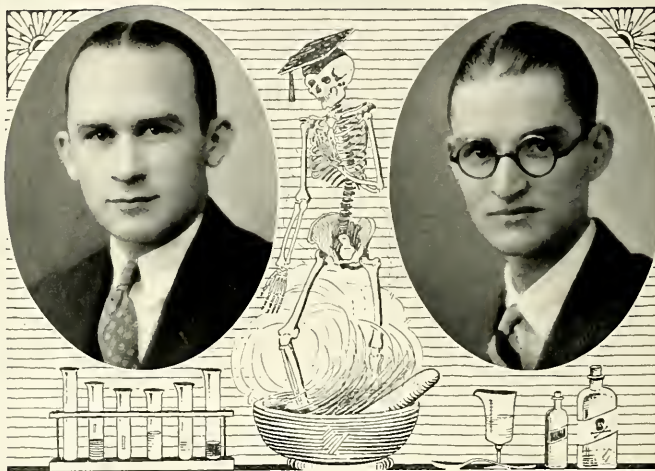

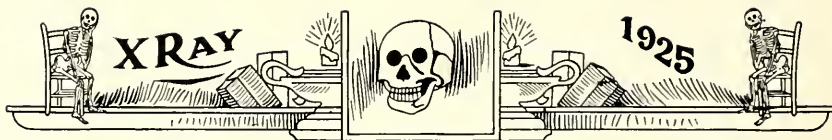

Matriculated 1922; Class Basketball Team.

"What's your hurry, little girl?"

"Hal" joined us in the second year of that battle for the sheepskin. Quiet and unassuming, he set about his task. A diligent student, an untiring worker gained for him recognition among his fellow classmates, and intermingled with this was the power of friendship. Slowly did he make them, but strongly did he keep them. But there is a weakness in even the strongest of us—and his is "girls." Yet never can it be said that he allowed one of these sirens to interfere with his studies.

With his honesty and sincerity, coupled with his knowledge, surely nothing but success awaits him.

"The wisest man is generally he who thinks himself least so."

Senior Medical Class

FRED ATWILL BROWN, $\Omega \ Y \ \Phi, \ \Sigma \ \Phi \ E$ Richmond, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Richmond College Club; West Virginia Club.

"Go right ahead, don't mind me!"

Every class boasts a genius, and we're no exception. Fred's speciality is getting advance dope. If you want to know the best section to get in, or the textbooks to buy, or when to cut class, ask Fred. But even geniuses have their dark moments. Imagine the feelings of one who knows in advance when Dr. Haskell is going to quiz him. Note we say "when," but not on "what," for no one ever knew that. Brown hails from West Virginia, and our guess would be that his sixth sense is the result of early and continued training. For we are told that in parts of West Virginia one must know certain things in advance, or make the acquaintance of the corner.

Fred is a staunch friend, a good student, an excellent fraternity man, and possesses the proper ideals for his chosen profession. When stability, tenacity, and common sense cease to be attributes of success, then—but not till then—will Brown be a failure.

DAVID M. BUCK, JR., $\Phi \ B \ H$ Bald Mountain, N. C.

Matriculated 1921.

"How is it today?"

Of all the North Carolinians with whom M. C. V. is endowed, we know of none who is more typical of and loyal to his native state. Four years ago Buck decided that healing the sick was a more gentle art than milking the cows and feeding the chickens, so now he is a surr "Doc." Ever since Buck picked up his first box of bones and paraded to his room to learn their make-up, he has been an ardent son of Aesculapius. We are told that his medicine bag contains samples of every drug in the pharmacopoeia, and when any of the boys feel indisposed, to Buck they go. We have found this "Doc" to be genteel, scholarly, and steadfast in his convictions. He has proven worthy of the name "friend" to any of us who happened along at the crucial moment.—"When a feller needs a friend." His honest endeavors, his loyalty and whole-heartedness, associated with his love of the medical profession, can but make for him a bright future.

"Aw, you're crazy!"

Having completed his pre-medical work at William and Mary, he pitched his tent in the direction of M. C. V., and became a member of our class. Since entering the institution, many obstacles have confronted him, but with a smile he has brushed them all aside, until at last he stands on the threshold of life, a credit to his school and profession. Having a high scholastic standing in his class, he has participated in college activities and done himself proud. Cupid pierced him with his deadly arrow and enrolled him in the Married Men's Club. He stands true to his ideals and loyal to his friends. We expect great things of "R. D.," and wish him the best of success. Ten years hence we will all learn of the wonderful work of the well known internist, Dr. R. D. Campbell.

Matriculated 1922; Vice-President Athletic Association.

"Uh, huh!"

When the Sophomore Class gathered "back" to the college in the fall of 1922, they found a new addition in the person of Joe Carder, who wandered from the University of Maryland, where he took his first year in Medicine. If one were to look at the sturdy, quiet, unassuming man from the bluegrass region, they would feel assured that he was going to make good in his new environment. This proved to be true, for there is not a man in the class who has made a more enviable record as a student. He is a friend to everyone and not a few consult him about their work. He has been a constant bodyguard to his friend, "Coffee," who also hails from the bluegrass region. We predict great things for Joe in the field of Medicine.

"What are you doing tonight?"

"Kit," as he is known to his many friends, has already proven himself capable of mastering 'most any situation, from describing a vertebra à la Christian to demonstrating a la Willis. There is not a member of the class who has labored more faithfully toward the accomplishment of his goal while here in college—and none has succeeded better than he. He is thoroughly familiar with any subject in which we have been taught, and to supplement this he is interning at Sheltering Arms, from which hospital many flattering reports come as to his ability in his chosen profession.

One never had a more loyal friend, nor the school a stronger supporter than Carson. He has that rare ability of fitting in whatever the occasion may be, and as we finish our careers as students one of our fondest recollections of life at M. C. V. will be of our associations with him.

"I know now, but—"

"Dug" has had such an eventful life that his biography would hold a ten-year-old boy spell-bound and would cause frequent spasms of his arrectores petorum. Some instances would cause the lanugo of a new-born infant to bristle. Space does not permit me to mention the numerous fights, the perilous hunting trips, the hobo expeditions, the descents into the entrails of the Shenandoah Caverns, the home runs and fan outs in baseball, the many hard-fought and brilliant football games at Roanoke College, where he once captained his team, the cash registers sold in the big city, the life in the army, and so on. Through all this is woven a thread of romance, for even this cave man, with sclerosed thoracic viscus, has surrendered to the relentless dart which has pierced his figurative sino-aortic node. Sweet missiles, soft and fluctuating in consistency, borne by twelve cents' worth of postage, frequently flutter in a course headed south. In the fall of 1921, this modern Jason entered M. C. V., and has made himself a necessary and important part of his class and school. Of his friends there are many, and his few enemies are really just not the right sort, that's all there is to it.

"Come in this house!"

If one were to ask what one product of West Virginia was best known here at school, the answer would be A. B. Clarke, and it is the most logical answer, for everyone in school knows "A. B." and after a few moments in his presence one would think the Mountaineer State was paradise itself, so well does he paint the picture. "A. B." is distinctly in a class of his own as regards his every activity. He is truly an optimist, for no one ever saw or heard of him looking at anything but the bright side of life, with a smile and word of comfort if the prognosis is grave, and there, perhaps, lies the secret of his success while in college. "A. B." has found time to take part in most every activity of school life, yet as a student he ranks among the best. We could not possibly portray in full the wealth of wit, the depth of that spirit of true friendship, nor the unmeasurable breadth of ability and indomitable perseverance possessed by him. We are sure if "A. B." leaves the imprint of his life in his chosen profession as he has here at school, then success must be his.

"I'm tight."

Rearred on a farm in the center of West Virginia, where industry booms and opportunities for advancement in every way is afforded. Following the footsteps of two of his brothers, Coffindaffer likewise decided to study Medicine at M. C. V. As a student, it could not be said that he studied to spot his professors and get high grades for grades' sake alone, but more so to learn his work as the subject matter was presented. He was earnest, energetic, and honorable in all his dealings. Reacting to injustices done with much indignation. True to his friends and outspoken in his belief. To be a surgeon is his aspiration, and we are sure his success is obvious.

"By golly!"

This young man has the distinction of being the largest man in our class, and in our contact with him we find that his manly principles are just as big as his anatomy. Colletti is the possessor of a powerful and retentive memory. He has the rare ability of constructing any chemical formula; whether it be an organic or inorganic preparation, he can trace an impulse from the periphery to the cortex without a recess from his breath. In case of an argument, he can get the heat and meat of it in a moment. He dips into the future as far as the human imagination can conceive. To him there is no mystery in Medicine without some method of solution.

Having labored into the midnight hours for his coveted M.D., we know that he will make a success for himself and reflect the true spirit of his old Alma Mater.

BERNARD DISICK New York City

Matriculated 1922.

"Did I say 'No'?"

Into our sophomore year there entered one Bernard Disick, a student, a man, a maker of friends. We all remember the days of pharmacology and physiology, when Dr. Haskell would call him out of class to cut out some poor dog's stomach. And such he did with the skill of a surgeon, earning for himself the name of Charlie Mayo, Jr. An independent thinker and a dependable worker, he has pressed onward and obstacles met have but served to blend the sterling qualities latent within him. Bernard's ability of sticking to one thing at a time is demonstrated even in his dealings with the fair sex, and it is well known that a fair Southern damsel's heart beats softly for him. The least we can predict for these two is eternal happiness, and we must congratulate the girl upon her intelligent choice. We wish for him the unlimited success his ability demands.

"Gimme a cigarette."

Of the various and sundry happenings of this young man's life, gained through our association with him, we can tell but a small part. His is the "Jewel life," which, turned in different directions, exhibits a new and sparkling facet. "Mib" has won a place in the heart of every man at M. C. V. by the same wonderful personality that will win him a place in the world. You have the ability, and to wish you every success is unnecessary, for you have proven to us that no set goal is impossible.

We have so far omitted one field of endeavor, but in so doing we have saved the best for the last. The cynosure of the ladies, "J. M." could have "biscuits" in several places if he so desired. However, sincere in the "affaires de coeur," as in all matters of life, he remains true to one, and it is in acknowledgment of his assured future happiness that we bid him Godspeed.

"I had 'em, but they got away."

When Rocky Mount turned out early one September morning to bid their fair son "good-bye and good luck," little did they realize that he would win a place in the hearts of so many in such a short time as four years. Charles is quiet and unassuming, but we're always on the lookout for something witty and original when he condescends to enter our conversation. Should he go up around the Yankoes to embark on his career, his typical Southern expression and originality would certainly make him a howling success. We believe, however, that he will linger and toil in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

We haven't been able to keep up with Charles sufficiently to report accurately on his numerous "love affairs," but suffice to say he is the "berries" among the ladies. We have never seen Charles with a real honest worried look on his face, but this does not mean that his life here has been a bed of roses—he shared alike with the rest of us. Charles can't go wrong, and no matter where he goes every man in '25 will be behind him and for him at all times.

MACK WILSON GIBSON, $K \Psi$ Statesville, N. C.

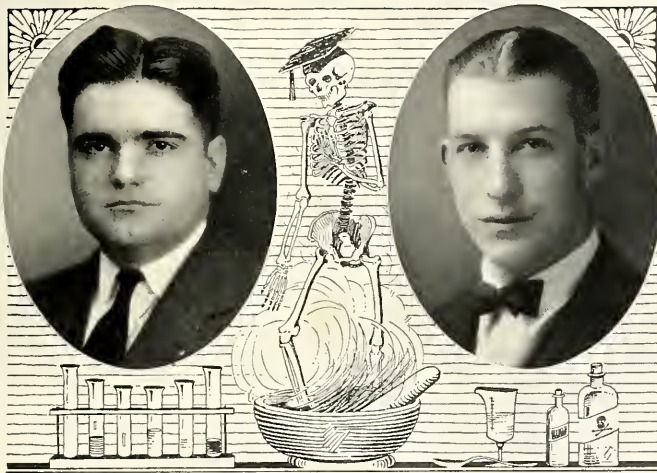

Matriculated 1923; A.B. Wake Forest College.

"There you are."

It is said that the personality of the physician contributes over 50 per cent toward his success. If this be true, Gibson is destined to be successful from the start, for he is one of the most pleasant and congenial men in our class. The fact that his hair is no longer dark may be due to the number of years spent in study, but those of us who have known his abundant supply of energy and "pop" can see no evidence of senility; in fact, he is very much alive, and if he continues to display in practice the amount of energy he has shown at M. C. V., he will soon become one of North Carolina's foremost physicians.

Gibson began his medical career in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army, and the fact that he is specially interested in G. U. work is due to his having spent two years in the G. U. service of the A. E. F.

"Let's go!"

"Gill" has that genial personality and pleasing smile which make a man popular anywhere he goes. Coupled with these are his untiring energy and broad-minded scholarship, which fit him for professional service. His lofty ideals speak through his life. Cupid pierced his portcullis with a fatal dart during his pre-medical career, and Mrs. Gilmore has been an important factor in his success in medical work ever since. Gilmore expects to return to central North Carolina to practice, and we feel sure that success awaits him there.

"Oh, hell!"

"Dexter" comes from the fair Southwest, where the exquisite and balmy atmosphere bathes the "hills of beauty." From the crest of one of these you can look across an emerald field to yet another, until they end at last in the embrace of the woodland. His high ambitions and aspirations, sound judgment, sturdy will power, deliberative thought, and diligent efforts are a few of the contributing factors in his successful scholastic career. In him are all the qualities and prerequisites necessary for continuous ascension of the ladder of success in any branch of medicine which he elects to pursue. Clothed with diplomacy, versed in the principles of democratic form of government, informed of the affairs of the nation and commonwealth, a good mixer and hand shaker, prepares him for the arena of politics. We sincerely trust that he will actively participate along this line of citizenship.

"Dex" is a "heart smasher" and a "lady killer," but somehow there is a faint odor of "bride's roses" when he comes around. So the latter authenticates the rumor that he is going to leave the "state of single blissfulness."

"Let's eat!"

He came to us from the great metropolis, and in the second lap of this trying race for the coveted M.D., he joined us. Smiling and happy he shook our hands. Those who had the privilege of starting with him saw in him a man with a vastly practical mind and excellent knowledge of his work, which he attained more by the powers of reason than by long hours of grinding, and, above all, they found him bubbling over with honest-to-goodness friendship.

He saw—yes, even as we all did—that before us there was indeed a task, and this task he conquered, and in so doing he left behind an enviable record.

With his sterling character, sound sense, and unusual ability, outstanding success must surely follow.

Matriculated 1921; Secretary-Treasurer Freshman Class; Editor-in-Chief "Skull and

"Subscribe to 'Skull and Bones'."

Graham had had more varied experience before entering the Medical College than many of us will have had in several years to come. He had attended V. P. I., William and Mary, and the University of Richmond; he had taught school; he had served in the U. S. Department of Justice, and in the U. S. Navy during the World War; he had married; he had even had "adhesions"; he was an experienced man.

It is impossible to tell where to begin to even enumerate the virtues of one who possesses so many as does Graham. Efficiently active in the affairs of his class and his school during his entire career, exercising mature judgment and good taste on all occasions, possessing a thorough understanding of human nature and a highly developed sense of humor, excelling in his studies, he has held the respect and admiration of his classmates and teachers from the beginning. Honest, straightforward, clean-cut, mature, able, modest, tolerant, cheerful—these are some of the adjectives which describe him—a good fellow, an excellent student, a genuine friend, and a high-class gentleman—this is Randolph Graham.

"Judy, behave!"

"Andy" spent his first year in Medicine at the University of Virginia, then decided that the country was no place for a "Romeo," and hence we have him with us. His attributes are many—the outstanding ones that we have noticed are his love for his studies, music and wit. He is ambitious in more ways than one. So whether we are looking for a "Doc" or a music master, we hunt for "Andy," and he never fails to "deliver the goods." That never-ending line of wit will not soon be forgotten by his classmates, and we look forward to seeing him a great success in his chosen profession.

"You kick 'em, I'm barefooted."

After living all his life in the "Richmond of the North," "Willie" decided to study Medicine. After being sidetracked to West Virginia University until he could receive his B.S. degree, he finally reached us in 1923—then our hardships began. He makes no denial about liking the ladies, and he has certainly made some "time" while here. But we find underneath his epidermis "Willie" is a straightforward fellow, who fosters high ideals—such high ideals that he plans to "do the continental medical centers" after having interned at one of New York's leading hospitals.

"Willie" goes out with that unbeatable combination of brains and humor, and we feel sure that he will become a valuable asset to the medical profession.

"Honesty is the best policy."

"Useless" hails from Dinwiddie County, Virginia. While yet a "young un," he determined to be an M.D., and has been untiring in his efforts to realize his ambition. After spending the requisite time at William and Mary Academy, and then at William and Mary College, he came to swell the ranks of the medics at M. C. V., but not before he had found time to exchange compliments with the "Boches" as a member of Uncle Sam's army in France. His chief diversions consist of frequent trips to Norfolk and quitting smoking once a month.

Through our associations with him we have found him to be a strong man, an earnest student, and a Southern gentleman. A friend to us all, and he carries the best wishes of his class in whatever he undertakes.

"My tongue within my lips I rein,

RAYMOND FRANCIS HACKING, Phi X Providence, R. I.

Matriculated 1922; Staff of "Skull and Bones."

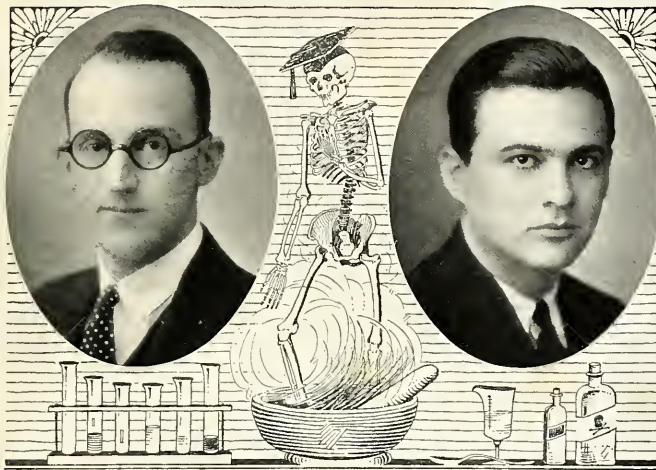

"Now what the hell do you know about that?"

A product of which New England may well be proud, "Ray" joined our ranks three years ago, and he has made his presence felt ever since. His qualities are too many to enumerate—his manly traits, his knowledge, his dignity, and his perfect manners are but a few. His accomplishments have already been broadcasted to the world in the form of his invention while taking physiology, and we expect many more to follow.

"Ray" has his goal, and he has been steadily climbing toward it for years. We not only think he will reach it—we know he will.

We wish he could be with us longer, but other fields will profit, and we'll retain fond memories. Good luck, old man, it's been a pleasure.

"Turn out the lights, men, I'm sleepy."

This "Lanky Tarhection" has had a "hectic" career. In other words, he believes in passing himself around and giving them all a treat. He loves variety. He began his collegiate career at Trinity College, North Carolina. The next year he went to North Carolina State, but again broke anchor, and finally stopped long enough at the University of West Virginia to complete his first two years of Medicine in 1923. In the fall of the same year, when the Class of '25 assembled, lo, "E. B.'s" head towered above all the rest.

Bacon is quite a ladies' man, but that fact has not detracted in the least from his achievements in things medical. He knows how to work, and doesn't mind doing it. His outstanding ability along with his personality are bound to bring him laurels.

"Hi you wuz?"

Here, ladies and gentlemen, is something worth looking at. Although he is not a Phi Beta Kappa, nor the star of M. C. V., he makes up for these seeming deficiencies by the excellence of his personality and good looks. "Bill" hails from the Tar Heel State, and his knowledge of Apinol made him famous in his pharmacology class. Seldom we find one who can or will expostulate on his home state products before the professor and students as "Bill" did. Living four years with "Bill," we have experienced the same joys and sorrows together, and in the common experience there has naturally arisen a strong bond of fellowship. Thrust out into the cruel, cold world, "Bill" is sure to win a place in the hearts of all those with whom he comes in contact. Proudly the community will point to "Our Doctor."

"Bill," the Class of '25 will always stand by you—if ever in need, look us up that we may prove it.

"Confound it!"

On a warm September day in 1921, "E. H." got off the train at Broad Street station, and then his troubles started. After wandering about for several hours, totally lost, he at last found the Medical College. Since 1921, he has worked faithfully and consistently, and has successfully mastered all the obstacles that have confronted him. There is no man in the class who is more likeable or who has a more pleasing personality or greater strength of character. At last the goal has been reached, and he now stands on the threshold of life, a finished product, well equipped with the essential facts to meet any emergency that may arise.

"E. H." seems especially adapted to general medicine, for he has always concentrated on Osler's "Practice of Medicine," and so for one so well prepared we predict a great and successful career.

"Though modest, on his embarrassed brow

"Ye ole Kentucky type."

"Chief" is the smallest man in class and is, therefore, chief of the "Dwarfs." He has been somewhat of a rambler in his time, "taking his fun where he found it." He studied at the University of Louisville, Marshall College, and the University of West Virginia. "Chief" has profited richly by his extended travels, as is evidenced by his genial personality, educated manner, and his ability to form and hold friendships.

Earnest, hard working and loyal, "Chief" will make a mark for himself wherever he goes. Just remember, old man, that when you go out into the world, you carry with you the esteem and affection of your fellow classmates, who have been glad for the intimate association with you during these years here.

"Go to hell!"

This sporadic case confronted and baffled the medical science of Richmond in the fall of 1921. After having spent two eventful years at the University of Richmond, during which time he spent his hours among books, women, and athletics, he was thrust upon the Medical College without word or warning. During his freshman year, Johnny's conspicuity became manifest around the Anatomy Hall—he was as busy as a one-armed paper hanger with generalized pectusiosis. Such a thirst for knowledge had never been paralleled in the history of the school. One can scarcely omit saying a word about this youngster's speed on quizzes. If Johnny could not finish a quiz before the whole class had reached the room, he would consider it a poor evening.

"Johnny" has never aspired to the lofty pedestal of "Romeo" or "Sheik"; in fact, women in general don't interest him in the slightest. However, it is rumored that last year one of the deadlier sex about had him digitalized, but he finally came back to his former state of oblivion and has remained so.

"Johnny's" faults are few, his virtues many, and his intellect far beyond his years. We can predict only a brilliant success for him, and we are proud to number him among the alumni of the Medical College of Virginia.

"Foxy" is a Tar Heel and proud of it. He is a good sport, enjoys life, and at the same time takes care of its duties. His outstanding characteristic is his ability to do the appropriate thing at the appropriate time. "Now she's a cute little kid, don't you think?"

"Arch" is the one man in his class who always has a smile. "The Sunshine Lad," as he is known in the hospitals, has only been with us two years, as West Virginia University gave him a B.S. degree and two years of Medicine. In the fall of 1923, "Arch" was one of the first in line at the registrar's office, and during this time he has made remarkable strides in the study of Medicine. "Arch" is one of the youngest men among the graduates, but one would never think that he is lacking in experience. We see a great future for this man. He is interested in all medical questions—especially in those concerning women and children.

M. C. V. loses a good man through the graduation of "Arch," but our loss will mean better health and greater happiness to some district in West Virginia, so we bid him Godspeed.

Matriculated 1921; B.S. University of Virginia; President Freshman Class; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet Officer, '22-'23; Faculty Editor "Skull and Bones," '23-'24 and '24-'25.

"Let's put ourselves on record."

'Tis easy to eulogize a man with but few outstanding qualities—not so with Jarman. To attempt here to analyze the traits of character in one so well balanced, yet seemingly paradoxical, is futile. He is deliberate, yet modest; sure of what he says and does, but never assertive; honest himself, but possessing such a keen sense of human nature as to detect and forgive the frailties of others; quiet 'till aroused by a sense of injustice done; living today for today, but storing up for the future; sympathetic, determined, kind. Just a true friend, an excellent student, a good soldier, a man.

Jarman is a strong supporter of co-education, and since his freshman year has taken an increasing interest in one of our far Southern States. Can it be possible that some day Virginia will lose the services of an excellent physician and Florida will gain a successful orange grower?

"That's my scope."

There were many strange faces in the Anatomy Hall and one hardly knew himself. This young, modest lad soon became a prominent figure and one well known to all. While sitting on a high stool in one corner of the room one day there came an outburst of laughter with an erythematous blush, first thought to be a grand attack of epilepsy or a hysterical attack of marked severity. Being accompanied out of the room by several colleagues and upon careful questioning, the etiological factor was revealed. For further information, ask "Peyton." Junkin has had us believe his marital obligations are nil, and one would well think this to be true from his many trips to the various nurses' homes and his many dates with prize-winning beauties. From the flowers sent, the letters received, the hours spent in meditation, numerous air castles, and anticipating practicing on the eastern shore—you can judge for yourself. He has proven himself a good fellow, a loyal friend, an independent and consistent worker. Nothing but success could come to one so determined.

That ever cut a throat or scuttled ship."

EDITH J. LACY, A E I Vigor, Va.

Matriculated 1921; B.S. Lynchburg College, '21; Student Volunteer.

"I don't know."

This dark-eyed, demure daughter of Aesculapius has for four years been appearing at classes promptly at 9:11 a.m., and evincing utmost surprise that the lecture had been in progress for 11 minutes. The research record credits her with the standardization of 143 samples of digitalis and 144 dead frogs. There is also to her credit an extra sized megaphone, which "Uncle Charlie" ordered for her special use. Her ability to accomplish maximum results with the expenditure of minimum energy has made possible her many social activities, for since the day she matriculated she is known to have missed three movies.

We are persuaded that the gentleness and infinite pains which characterized her vivisections will follow her through disease-cursed India, and we congratulate that country on having entwined forever itself in the heartstrings of such an excellent person as Edith.

"A woman was the leader of this."

Senior Medical Class

ROBERT GALEN LEFEVRE, $\Omega Y \Phi, \Phi K \Sigma$ Lancaster, Pa.

Matriculated 1921; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '21-'22.

"Say, fellows!"

LeFevre is running true to LeFevre form. He has been following in the footsteps of his illustrious brother, "Bob," as he is known in the vicinity of M. C. V. and surrounding territory, has been with us through four long years of struggle. He is blessed with the art of keeping the knowledge of his whereabouts sealed unto himself. He goes out on a date, gets disgusted with the women, "cusses" them out and leaves—but invariably returns. He has already earned a reputation in practical medicine, and his "hang-out" is the amphitheater. In there he hopes to learn a science which will crown his ambitions and make his name famous. He has made good here and we know he'll make good wherever he goes. We will follow his progress with interest and we predict for him well merited success.

"Thy modesty is a candle to thy merit."

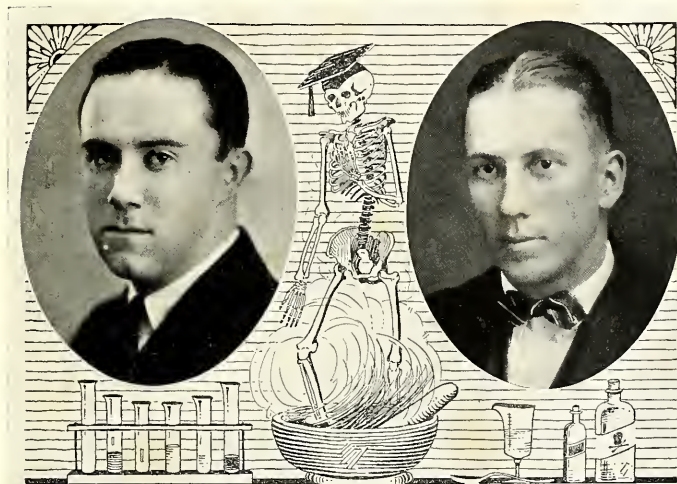

HYMAN PETER LEVIN, $\Phi A K$ Cleveland, Ohio

Matriculated 1922; B.S. West Virginia University.

"Does it hurt?"

Cleveland, Ohio, contributed this boy to our class, and that city may well be proud of its representative. Hyman's ready smile, warm handclasp, and good fellowship have won the friendship of all his fellows. To say that he is conscientious, optimistic, and intensely practical is to mention only a few of his merits. His motto, and one to which he rigidly adheres, is, "Honesty, Industry, and Perseverance," and if he takes out into the world all of the admirable qualities which he has displayed during his two years' with us, he'll be close to the top before very long.

"The last pleasure in life is the sense of discharging one's duty."

Senior Medical Class

MAURICE MATTHEW LYNCH, JR., $\Phi P \Sigma, K A$ Winchester, Va.

Matriculated 1921.

"Yes, indeed, I've seen hundreds of them."

"Ptosis" Lynch was born a doctor—if he hadn't been, the college would never have had an excuse for giving him a degree. Hailing from the wilds of Winchester, this witty son of St. Patrick descended upon his unsuspecting classmates in the fall of 1921. Hardy constitutions prevented the shock from being fatal. We soon found, however, the rare combination of qualities beneath his homely face. Sunny disposition, but not too sunny to be imposed upon; trustworthy friend, honorable in his actions, courageous in his convictions. In "Irish" we find that happy combination of a good average student, who invariably passes his classes and still finds time to keep up with the many phases of life in general, and is the type of man who can't help but succeed.

"The women! God bless them—we can't live with them,
And we can't live without them!"

CHARLES FRANK MANGES, $\Phi B \Pi$ Troutville, Va.

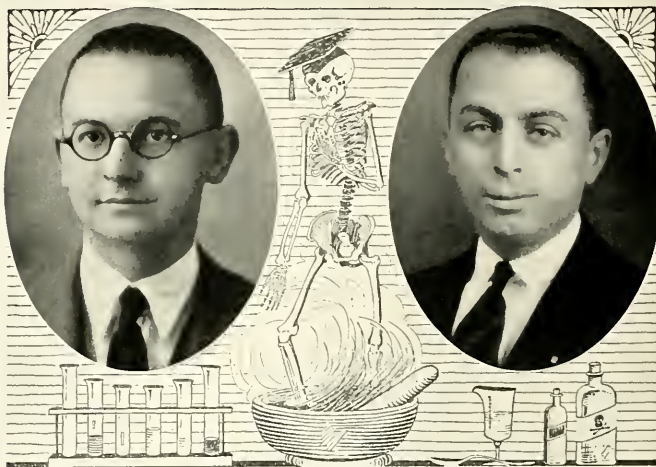

Matriculated 1921; Southwest Virginia Club; Class Basketball Team; Interns Sheltering Arms Hospital.

"I'll bite; what is it?"

We wish to present for your study C. F. Manges, better known to his classmates as "Meninges." He came to the Medical College early one September morning, as we readily surmised, just recently from the farm; fact is, this was in evidence in his every action. Since entering the college, Manges has mastered those noticeable characteristics and with them the other difficulties that have arisen. He is a "twister" in every sense of the word, and many times the grades he received came apparently as a surprise to him, but not to his classmates. He not only stands well scholastically, but on the basketball floor he shines. His ability is evidenced by the fact that he has played a wonderful game at guard on his class team for the past three years.

Although Manges came here fresh from the hills of southwest Virginia, he now goes out a well-rounded, polished man, ready to enter into the practice of Medicine. His success as a student leads us to believe that he will have a wonderful future.

"The cares of the world are written on his brow."

ASHBY GODDIN MARTIN, Phi Beta Kappa Toano, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Interne Club; Interne City Home Hospital, '24-'25; University of Virginia Club; M. C. V. Tennis Team.

"Can't you find Goad?"

Here, gentle reader, is another man of whom we are proud. He first came upon our horizon four years ago, after taking his pre-medical work at the University of Virginia, and embarked as a charter member of our class upon the study of Medicine. During his sojourn here he has acquitted himself with honor with each new endeavor. He has proven himself a student of no mediocre type, a delightful personality, an untiring worker, and a gentleman of high order. We have learned to admire his sterling character more and more as it has been revealed to us through the vicissitudes of our student career.

He has been equal to every task, faithful to every trust, sincere in every thought, and sane in every judgment. Time can but ripen such a personality into a career rich with brilliant achievements, and we predict that some community, as well as his class, will point with pride to this young man as their doctor, whose future pioneer work will enrich the pages of medical literature.

"True worth is in being, not seeming."

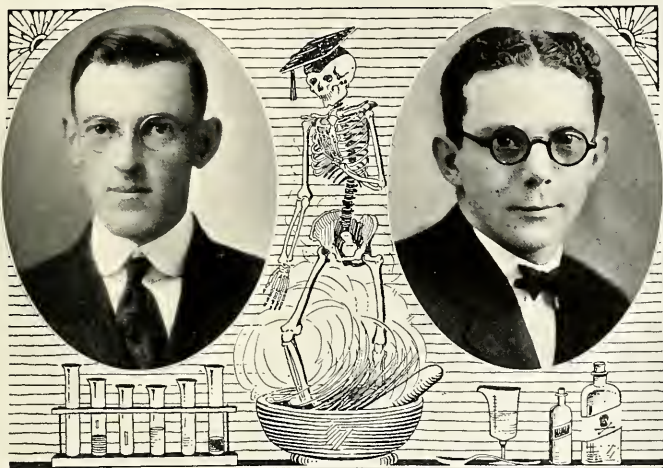

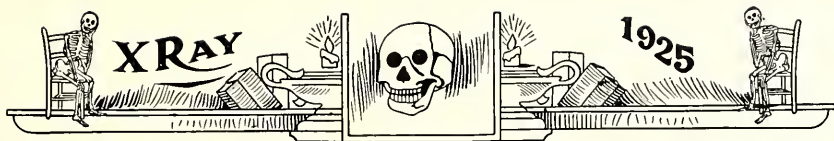

VITO JOSEPH MEROLA Bronx, New York City

Matriculated 1923; B.A. Wake Forest College.

"Well, fellows, it's a hard life, but it won't be long now."

Merola came to us from Wake Forest College, where he left an enviable record of scholarship and gentlemanly conduct. When he leaves the Medical College of Virginia, history will repeat itself. Others should take lessons in loyalty to their Alma Mater from him. If success comes to him who determines to persevere, his plantar arch will some day rest on the top round of the professional ladder.

"Success comes to him who overcomes the obstacles which confront him."

Senior Medical Class

SANNIE GRADY MILLER, X Z X Roseland, Va.

"Sure!"

Sannie came to us from William and Mary College, where he took his pre-medical work. He was in the service a couple of years, and then became "professor" for a year, during which time he helped to instruct the youth of this great commonwealth.

To all of us, Sannie is a quiet, unassuming, gentlemanly chap, and minds his own business. To those of us who know him best, Sannie is a short story writer and poet of no mean ability. He is a hard working, conscientious student, and the logical conclusion is this, that he will be the same kind of doctor. Here's to you, Sannie, may the best come to you, is our wish.

"A very gentle beast and of a good conscience."

DANA TRESCOTT MOORE, Θ X, Φ B II, Φ Σ N Oakland, Md.

West Virginia Club; Masonic Club.

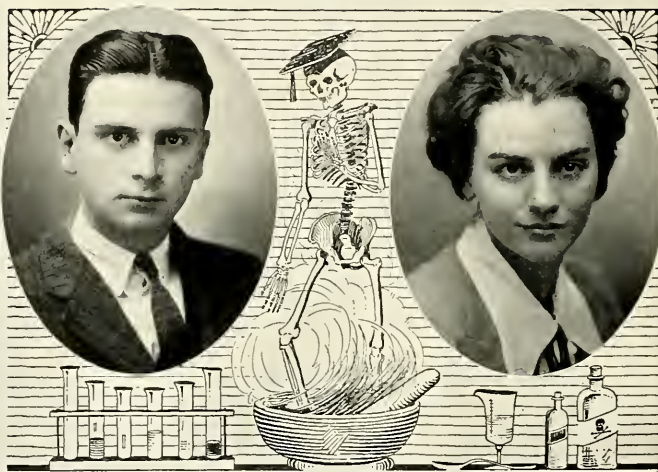

" 'Tis none other than 'Dinty' himself."

Behold above our one and original "Dinty Moore"—true to form alone in the color of his hirsute arrangements. Contrary to his prototype of "Jiggs" fame, Dana Trescott is shy of disposition, quiet in temperament, and neither the consort of the gin mill's amber essence nor the Marinello's pieces-de-resistance. Possessed of a rare sense of humor and a true appreciation of the finer, more serious things of life—to those few who know the inner self of him—all are proud to call him friend. His hobbies are West Virginia, "Hell's Bells," a gray Paige, Daytona, and one Al. of certain O. B. fame.

A good student, a real fellow, and a true friend, we have every expectation of great things from this man.

"Happy am I, from care I am free,

Why can't they all be contented like me?"

Senior Medical Class

JAMES ARTHUR NEWCOME, $\Phi K \Sigma$, $\Phi B H$, $\Phi \Sigma N$ Keyser, W. Va.

Matriculated 1923.

"Mightst all Chrichty!"

"Jim" came to us in 1923, after having received his B.S. degree from the West Virginia University. Possessing all the essentials which go to make up success, we have felt little doubt as to the goal he will eventually reach in his chosen profession.

Always ready to lend a helping hand, "Jim" has won many friends for himself. He is quiet and reserved at all times, and has added much dignity to the class.

"Jim" embarked upon the sea of matrimony two years ago, and from all we can learn is having a safe and happy journey. We hope that his success may be even greater than that which we predict for him.

"He could raise moustaches dark and nice and after solve them in a trice."

JEANNETTE TALBOTT MORRIS, $A J H$ Gainesville, Fla.

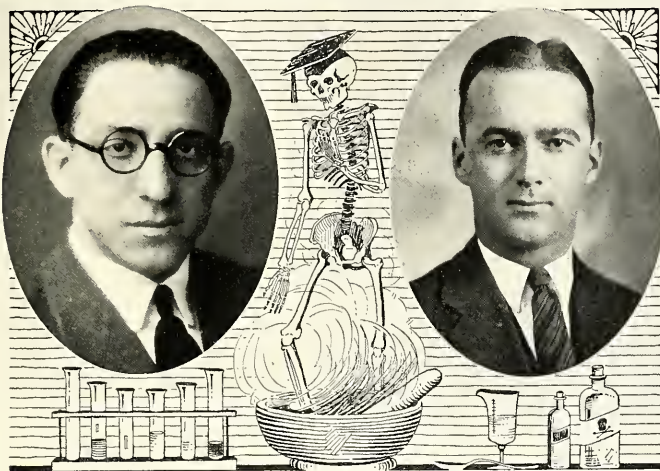

Matriculated 1921; Woman's Club.

"That's the best I ever saw."

"Jean" is the type of girl who makes co-eds a pleasure—always a good sport. She faces life with a smile and inspires others to do likewise. Her truly feminine graces win for her the admiration of all. While her kind sympathy is a balm for those who are suffering, cleverness in diagnosis is her outstanding attainment, and reproves the old adage that "Girls are brighter than boys."

"Jean" is an earnest worker, a good student, and a true and useful friend. She says what she means and means what she says, and there is no sham about her. She is truly a typical Southern lady from the Land of Flowers.

"Obl Nature swears the lovelier dears
Her noblest work she classes O."

HARRY SIMON NEWMAN Richmond, Va.

Matriculated 1921; University of Richmond Club; V. P. I. Club.

"Through thick and thuck we stuck."

After the encounter with Madame Hoskins and E. C. Leroy Miller, Harry has adopted the above motto as his highest principle in life. His numerous friends, amongst whom are Dr. "Charlie" and Timothy S., supported him loyally in carrying out his principle when Ward H. made his last stand.

Despite the numerous obstacles and difficulties that threatened to thwart his progress, Harry has emerged victoriously from the conflict—and he is now on the road toward the realization of his one aim in life—to be a doctor, and a damn good one.

"Remember ever, through storm and stress,
That over the hilltop lies success."

ROBERT CONNERY O'NEIL, Phi X Warren, R. I.

Matriculated 1922; President Senior Class; Tennis Team; German Club.

"Damn right!"

The rather formidable Robert C. O'Neil is familiarly known to the school in general and his classmates in particular as "Bob." With his cheerful smile, optimistic outlook and unfailing good nature, he has won all our hearts. Pre-medical work and the first year in Medicine saw "Bob" ensconced at Georgetown University. Under the tutelage of girl friends' fathers, who were congressmen, "Bob" developed considerable political acumen, which has been manifesting itself in devious ways ever since. Not alone in politics, but socially as well, "Bob" has made his mark. However, in the latter the "c" must stand for "cosy," for less is heard about these activities. Mixed with politics and assumed social obligations has been a generous dose of scholastic endeavor, which has carried "Bob" through with flying colors.

Keep up the good work, "Bob," and if your policy in the future is as well adapted as that of the past the presidency of the American Medical Association is before you.

"To hell with wine, women, and song!"

Senior Medical Class

JOHN FRANK POWERS, X Z X Willard, N. C.

Matriculated 1923; B.A. Wake Forest College.

"Damn!"

After four years of creditable work at Wake Forest College, John, also known as "Henry," entered our class in September, 1923. His business manner and consistent work have won for him the respect and admiration of the faculty and students. John's special interest in "Physical Diagnosis" (Cabot) has prevented him from living up to his former reputation as a "sheik."

Powers expects to practice in eastern North Carolina and if the character of his work here is to be taken as an index to his future, his success is assured.

"Eat, drink, and be merry."

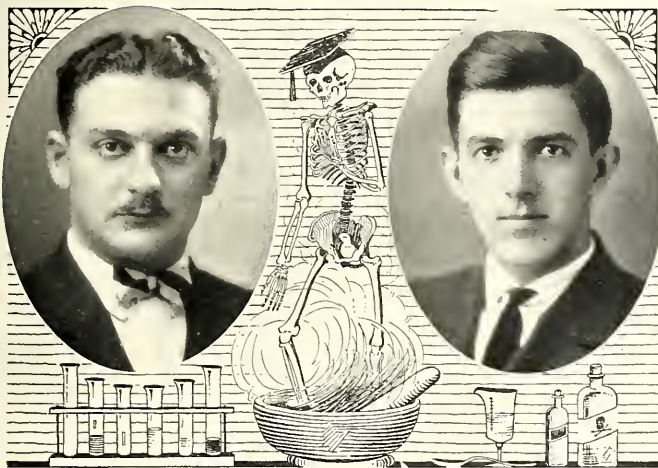

CHARLES LAFAYETTE PLUNKETT Richmond, Va.

Matriculated 1921; German Club.

"Driest party I was ever on,
Believe me, bean, I'm wet."

"Plunk" was a sort of puzzle to the class. He did not rush headlong into the formation of pseudo friendships, which might be found lacking after better acquaintance. Although he has no melodious voice, he has in no sense neglected either wine, women, or song during his sojourn at this institution. He is always perfectly at home with his books, his wine, or his women, and refuses to be separated from any one of them in toto. A steady student, fair in all his dealings, the acme of honesty, and faithful to his friends. With such virtues as these, success is bound to be his, and some day M. C. V. will be justly proud of this member of our class.

"O! Would some gift of the Power give us
To see ourselves as others see us."

Senior Medical Class

JAMES CHAPMAN REPASS, Θ X, Φ X Richlands, Va.

Matriculated 1921.

"He's a 'sheik'; look at his monstache!"

One who has never known "Rip" has missed a great deal. He is from a rough and rugged country where God made coal and men. For his four years we are grateful, because of his influence as a man and classmate. Each year found "Rip" climbing the ladder of the medical profession, and now we have him a full-fledged doctor.

"Rip" will always be remembered for his sincerity and good fellowship, and when he leaves us we are sure to lose a good friend, but the Class of '25 bids him Godspeed.

"Attempt the end, and never stand in doubt;
Nothing's so hard but search will find it out."

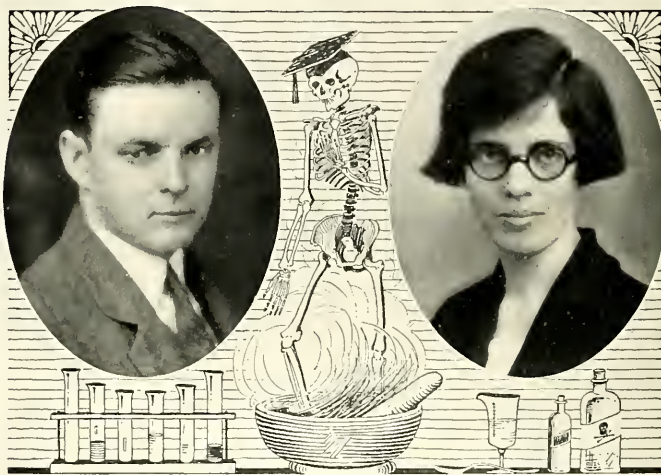

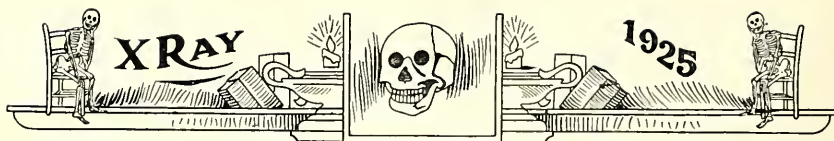

JOSEPH EDWARD RUCKER, X Z X Moneta, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Class Basketball Team; Varsity Squad, '23-'24.

"I ain't got any."

Linger awhile and behold this lanky lad from the blue hills of southwest Virginia. For look where you may, you will be a long time in finding his superior in a combination of athletic, moral, and scholastic attributes. He possesses that fortunate quality of being an excellent student without being a grind. Just consult his basketball record and general average for the past four years and you will not only see in him an athlete, but a "twister" par excellence. This particular young man goes out from us a well balanced, professionally polished specimen, equipped with the best that old M. C. V. can offer, and possessing a steadfastness of mind and purpose far beyond his years. Truly, we feel that he has chosen wisely and well.

"Not of steel, but of live oak."

Senior Medical Class

WILLIAM GRADY SMITH, X Z X Charlotte, N. C.

Matriculated 1923; A.B. Wake Forest College; Interne James Walker Memorial Hospital.

"That's right, 'Bud'."

We present here one of the most likeable men in the Class of '25. "Bud" is the type of cheerful, unselfish fellow who soon makes a host of friends in any community—and when it comes to digging out textbooks, he's there. In fact, statistics show that Smith can absorb more Osler in less time than any man in the class. The speed of his mental acuity is destined to bring him fame in his future work of applied therapeutics.

"Look then to thyself and leave the rest to God, Thy conscience and the grave."

LAURA GLADYS SMITHWICK, A E I Manson, N. C.

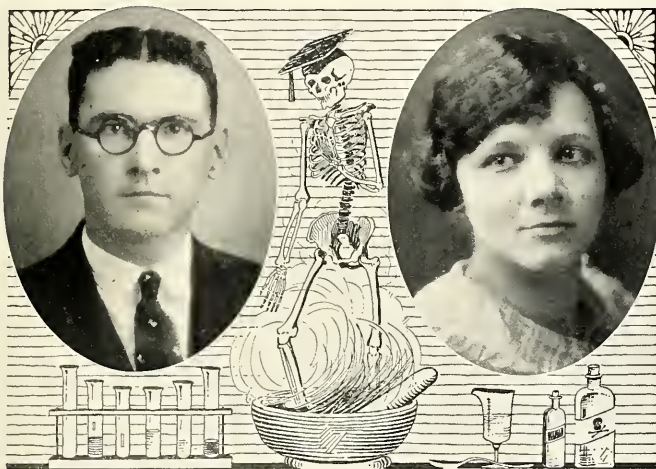

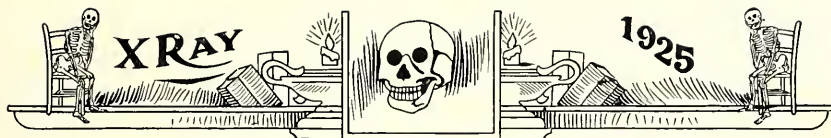

Matriculated 1921; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet; Class Historian; North Carolina Club;
Student Volunteer; Woman's Club; Interne Catawba Sanatorium, Summer, 1921.

"I wonder if they have this in China?"

Gladys has had quite a diversified education. She graduated from Oxford College as a Bachelor of Domestic Science; later she entered the University of Virginia and pursued the study of sciences and theology. The fall of 1921 found her matriculated as a freshman in M. C. V., and during the four closing years she has been faithful to her work, doing the tasks assigned in a cheerful manner. She has given a great deal of time to student volunteer work and to other organizations which tend to promote a better M. C. V.

Gladys has always had China in her mind as her future home. Here her field of usefulness as a medical missionary will be unlimited; China will reap bountifully of her rich personality.

"Attempt the end, and never stand in doubt,
Nothing so hard but search will find it out."

Senior Medical Class

EVERETT HANLEY STARCHER, Φ B Π Ripley, W. Va.

Matriculated 1923; Cotillion Club; West Virginia Club.

"I don't want it then."

This young lad came to us from our sister state, after receiving his B.S. degree from West Virginia University.

"Starch" is one of the receding type of fellows, but those who know him best can appreciate his sterling qualities. He is honest, upright, and always on the level. Everett's pathway has not always been strewn with roses, but with that happy smile and increasing devotion to duty he has driven on to his scholastic attainments. With all his devotion to his work we would not for a moment have the fair reader believe this has been his whole aim—with the sound of jazz music his appearance is sure and his co-ordination is harmonious. During his stay at his Junior Alma Mater, rapid strides were made along the line of Cupid's arrows, even the charm of the Southern beauties could not deflect the arrow—thus it struck the fatal blow last summer.

We predict a bright future for "Starch," and wish him much success. Wherever he may go, whatever he may undertake as his specialty, he carries with him the good will of his Alma Mater.

"The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness."

OLGA EMMA STEINECKE, Z Φ Keystone, Va.

Matriculated 1921.

"Where are the rest of the boys?"

West Virginia claims the honor of Steinecke's native state. She spent the first years of her young life there, but she survived and has been convalescing satisfactorily in her new environment—with no medication other than Psycho Therapy in full A.M.A. doses, with no indication of an idiosyncrasy for the past four years. During her stay here she has been a consistent worker, and the refiner's fire of the professors has revealed the purity of the metal of which she is composed. Her pleasing personality, her kindly interest in her fellow students have won for her the good feeling of her classmates. It is with keen regret that we let her go, but 'tis with the feeling that the community in which she locates will look with pride to their efficient doctor, and we shall be happy to read of her success.

ROBERT STUART VAN METRE, $\Phi B H$, $\Phi \Sigma K$, $\Phi \Sigma N$. . . Martinsburg, W. Va.

Matriculated 1923; West Virginia Club; Cotillion Club; Square and Compass; B.S.
West Virginia University.

"Damned if I know."

This youth, who is so spick and span in dress, light and debonair in mien, quiet in speech and actions, has been referred to the various departments for consultation. Reports of rickets and acromegaly have been returned, but "in using all the known means of study," our X-Ray reveals some of the more fine and rare elements working for a common good. In this we see a man loyal and true to the highest ideals of sociologically inclined people.

"Agor," for some mysterious reason his classmates like to call him, wears snake oil on his hair and a shine on his shoes just in order to be a member of the Mountaineer Club. His college career at the West Virginia University is marked by social activities and eye strain for both near and distant objects. However, he ran away from the university with a B.S. under his arm, and appeared at M. C. V. for a degree in his chosen field.

In life's saddest moments, his level head and quiet manner will win a place of prominence, for he holds the panacea for all the diseases to which the human body falls heir.

"It is possible that a man can be so changed by love that one could not recognize him as the same person."

GEORGE HUGH WARREN, JR. Smithfield, Va.

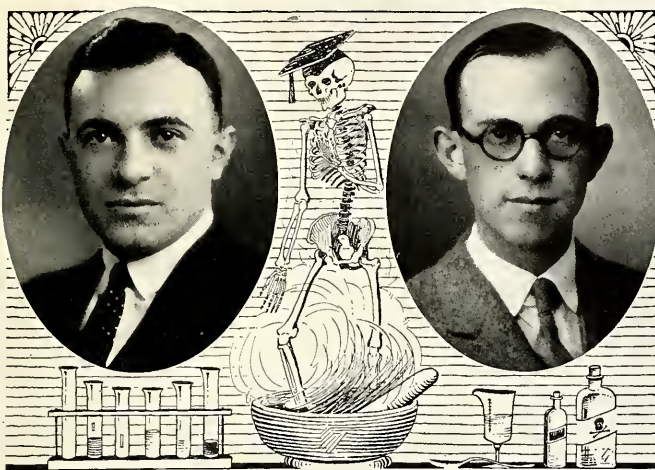

Matriculated 1924; University of Richmond Club; Tidewater Club.

"You better take those confound pills."

"Troppe," as he is known by the members of his class, comes to us from Smithfield, Va. Being short in stature and well rounded, we conclude him to be a worthy representative of the famous Tidewater Section, and his renown we feel will surpass even that of the "Smithfield ham."

Honest, consistent, thorough, observing, reliable—these adjectives all apply to "Troppe." A good student, a genuine friend, and a clean-cut gentleman. This is how he will be remembered, and it is safe to prophesy that, in the course of time, he will work out his own future. The world holds no fear for him.

"The choicest things in life come in small packages."

Senior Medical Class

SAMUEL WEINSTEIN, $\Phi \Lambda E$ Richmond, Va.

Matriculated 1921; Square and Compass Club.

"I don't know, but I should imagine."

"Sammy," having taken one degree, namely, that of Ph.G. in Pharmacy, from M. C. V., elected to delve deeper into the mysteries of the art of healing and resolved to make of himself an M.D., and so cast his lot with our class. Although quiet and demure, there is a telltale twinkle in his eyes indicating his keen sense of humor. Loyal to his friends, faithful in his work, with all the qualities that go to make up true manhood, he has always used his influence for the highest and noblest things, and the memory of him will linger long in the hearts of his classmates.

His ability as a student has been well demonstrated by his excellent standing during his four years of study. Sudden emergencies hold no terrors for him, and he meets them serenely and with confidence. He is on his way to great success and he will get there in record time.

"Short but sweet, for inches do not make the man."

CHARLES STERLING WHITE, $\Phi P \Sigma$ Stovall, N. C.

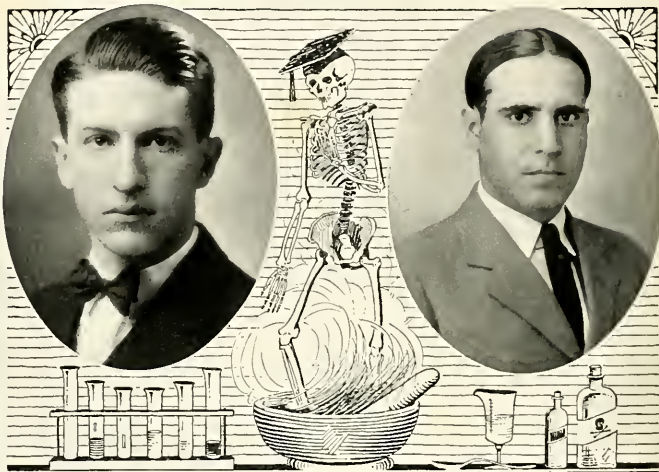

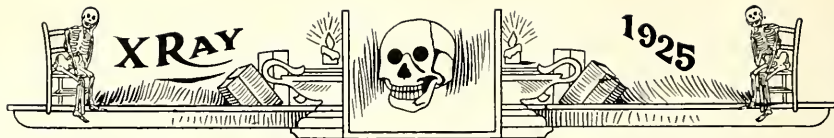

Matriculated 1921; North Carolina Club; German Club; Historian Junior Class.

"Yes, he good."

This thin, endavorous, scholarly, four-eyed youth would give one the impression of dignity and sobriety, scholarly attainment. It is true that he possesses these admirable traits of character, but do not be deceived by this one glance at his stately frame. On first entering the halls of the Medical College of Virginia, Sterling had a peculiar idiosyncrasy to apples—such that the odor of a well-ripened one would give the effect of a fluid drawn of hashish or cannabis indica. By painstaking and thorough treatment for four years, he has developed such an immunity that the pure elixir can be administered in heroic doses with no untoward symptoms other than an exaggeration of his customary hospitality.

We extend to our fellow classmate and friend, C. Sterling, the best of good wishes, and know his success is assured.

"Better is a bright comrade on the weary road than a horse litter."

Senior Medical Class

PERRY HAYNES WISEMAN, $\Phi P \Sigma$ Henrietta, N. C.

Matriculated 1921; Vice-President Athletic Association; North Carolina Club; German Club; Interne Hygeia Hospital.

"The road is rocky, but it won't be rocky long."

Wiseman, better known as "Red," took his pre-medical work at the University of North Carolina and came to us in 1921, determined to have an M.D. degree if it took sixty years. It did not take this long, however, for "Red" has applied himself well and is a very practical student in all branches of Medicine.

"Red" has won a way into the hearts of all the members of his class by his ever present sunny disposition. There is nothing he enjoys more than a song by his quartette before class. He has not neglected the social side of his education, for he is an honorary member of the "Lion Tamers Club."

Wiseman, with his practical knowledge and friendliness, will make good in his chosen profession.

"Let us have music dying,
And I seek no more delight."

EDWIN SAYRE WOODYARD, $N \Sigma N, \Phi \Sigma K$

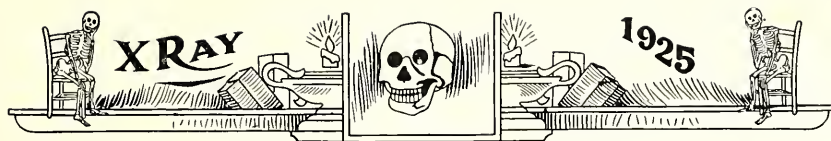

Matriculated 1922.

"I've gotta meet the wife."

"Woody!" And as the years roll by and as our joints begin to squeak, and when some of us have even grown old enough to play that ancient game called golf, there's one name that ever and anon will stand as synonymous with friendship, sincerity, intelligence, ability, and all the good qualities that go to the making of a man.

We've heard it said that the popular man must have his foe, and yet here in "Woody" we meet the exception to the rule. His personality invaded both sexes, and when this son of West Virginia joined us in the second year of his terrible grind, he was quite readily conceded the title of "The Original Shok," and the fair sex marked him well. However, he has met his "Sheba," and has now settled down to his life work—the practice of Medicine—with an earnestness which, we are sure, will lead him on and on to fame and honor in his chosen profession.

"Here's a man with whom we hate to part,
A man with a soul—a man with a heart."

Senior Class History

THE die for us was cast when, in September, 1921, we plunged into the Rubicon, but the order of procedure was reversed and our battle was begun where other battles are ended—with the bones. We found it humorous though difficult to describe the cellar in the dome. We then met a carcass, which introduction embraced not only the structures, but their several thousand relations, and for the four months that followed our approach was the announcer that Station M. C. V. was broadcasting, "Still as I gaze upon you, I feel my soul become vast like you."—Billie.

"Elizabeth" delivered to us his annual address of welcome, which included a pressing invitation to join the "Y"; also recommendations that we study "How to Study." He constructed for our special chagrin a fool-proof burette, which proved to us no obstacle.

The original class suffered considerable mortality at the end of the first year, but the missing ranks were promptly filled by nine recruits, who have given us, without reserve, their loyal support, so that we have remembered their tardiness no more.

We were halted by "Charlie," who was fond of riding us because he had the habit. But because he realized that a medical student is the only thing out of which God could make a doctor, our taste of drugs and vital processes was not the sole benefit derived from his course, for once having been brought under the stress of "Charlie's" personality, we could not shrink back to the original smallness when the stress was removed.

Chlamydobacteria that we were, we resisted opsins phagocytes, for we were hypersensitive to the fact that we autoclave to Electic C. L. Miller's aggresins.

In "Brodie" we had a changeless friend, and though "hoary frost was on his brow, eternal springtime was in his heart."

Of course, 'tis a relative term, but Pathology is the normal writ large—granting this, Ward H. was abnormally normal. Having been exposed to the "Cooking" process for four semester hours, we emerged from the flames only half baked.

We were ushered into the third year en masse, and augmented by twenty men from Wake Forest and West Virginia, whom we judged by external appearances, and two years of close association has deepened our conviction that they are par excellence.

Dr. La Roque immediately performed an emergency debridement, removing all preconceived conceptions that the third year was an easy triumph. Later we were met by Drs. Willis Coleman and Mauck, who gave us an inspiration to join their white-robed throng.

Dr. Vanderhoof's infallible "call 'e roll, please," precipitated several attacks of Dozing, All Here, from which we promptly recovered as he divulged to us the secrets of achylia gastrica. Dr. Tompkins taught us Caisson disease and Mountain Sickness with variations in between. With the aid of one of our colleagues, Dr. Higgins was able to discover the cause of coma—the coma bacillus.

If we are not Lustrious Obstetricians Always it will be a fault of implantation our cortices and not one of presentation by Drs. Baughman, Gray, and Bear.

Dr. Tucker gave us the art of teaching patients to walk the chalk line. Dr. Hudson the gentle art of sneaking up on Stegomyia Calopus and exterminating yellow fever with one swat.

Dr. Nelson laid down the anlage of a cerebral eye, but with this new development we were not to attempt to see what we could hear.

Three years ago we peered into the future as far as freshman eye could see and beheld ourselves seniors, but the pinnacle that seemed so lofty then is only a stairway of service to humanity.

Everyone will admit that Dr. Joe White went "against the rule" when, to a fully anesthetized patient, he gave the injunction to "Look down, my friend, look down."

Dr. Graham intimated that he expected fourth year students to attend lectures, but this is no hardship, since he does not restrain his students with the same influence that he does his patients.

We are indebted to Dr. Murrell for having presented to us a skin that was not dry.

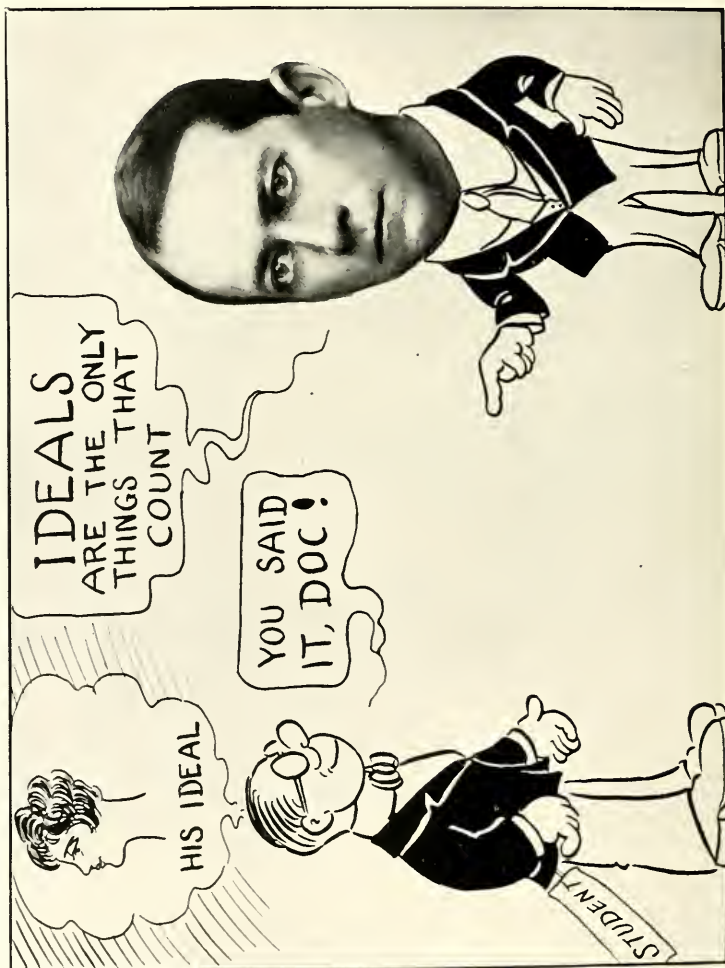

We hold in grateful esteem our most excellent faculty, and it is largely through their untiring efforts and patience that

"We at noonday, in the bustle of man's worktime,
Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back, as either should be,
'Strive and thrive!' cry 'Speed!' fight on, fare ever
There as here!"

Junior Medical Class History

IN September, nineteen hundred and twenty-two, the most cosmopolitan of all aggregations that ever assembled at the Medical College of Virginia answered the Freshman Medical Class roll. In this group there were representatives from every section known to America, from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande and from Hampton Roads to Puget Sound, but this was not our territorial limit, for the sons of Europe were here in no small numbers.

Since our first roll call, our night life has played no small part in our college life, and, as you know, dear reader, there are a great many Richmonds in Richmond, yet we have seen them all, for we have seen the sun set on every section and the sun rise on every street corner, yet please don't get the impression that if pleasure interferes with business we let business go—although we do not boast, like some of our predecessors, that our class is composed entirely of Oslers, Mathews, and Cabots, we do point with pride to the fact that we have met and successfully repelled all the versatile attacks of the All-American squad.

In September, nineteen hundred and twenty-four, our lines were recruited with men from the far-off foreign lands of North Carolina and West Virginia. It is needless to say that they, too, have acquitted themselves with all the dignity and bearings of would-be physicians.

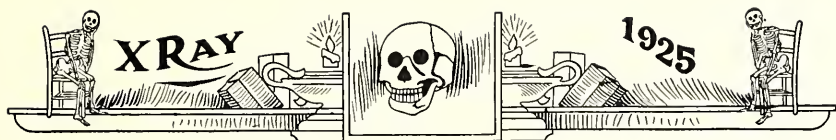

Now, more seriously, our creed has been clearly expressed by the great English poet, Tennyson:

"Our purpose holds,
To sail beyond the sunset and the baths
Of all the western stars until we die."

Yes, our purpose holds to sail beyond the stars and the glowing sunsets, and after one more year we hope to leave the quiet harbor and then we will find more stormy seas, yet we will keep that gleaming scroll upon which our deeds are written as a glittering star shining undimmed by a watchful world.

Thus, I record as truthfully as I know the history of the class of nineteen hundred and twenty-six.

Sophomore Medical Class History

WE pause amid the intricate problems of medical science to reflect for a moment, and live again that bright September morning when a little circle of freshmen gathered at the portals of the Medical College of Virginia. There was still re-echoing within them the messages of good luck and Godspeed of those back home, which had seemed only to intensify the flames of aspiration destined to illuminate the obscure pathway to the goal of M.D. But they were likened unto air castles, the very chambers of which were furnished with the machines of the Omnipotent Physician, and the walls embellished with portraits of a Lister or Pasteur. When once ushered into the halls of old M. C. V., the curtain of reality began its upward trend, and the story was revealed. One that sponsored a retreat from the pedestal of importance founded upon the dreams of extra-professional education. Alas! we found ourselves really studying medicine with a better conception of what it really meant. Thus initiated into the routine of medical didactics, we sailed on to the end of Freshman Medicine, and said good-bye until next September, but the half had never been told. Sophomore ambitions had wrought skepticism as to the tales of woe portrayed to us by those who had gone before.

We had heard of Dr. Charlie and of Dr. Phillips, too, but we were from Missouri until it really did come true.

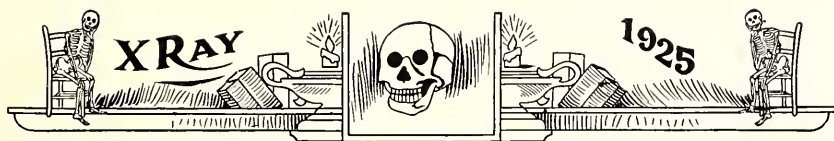

But now we are on the brink of the sea of achievement, with the good ship "Junior" ready to bear us across.

Freshman Medical Class History

THE fall of 1924 brought to the Medical College of Virginia its yearly tribute of "perishables" or "misters," men deemed yet even unworthy of the cognomen "Doc." And perhaps justly. Our pockets bulged with bones instead of projecting stethoscopes; we carried long, unsightly wooden boxes instead of sleek bags of sombre and professional hue; our upper lips were yet unadorned and, lastly, that forget-me-not odor pronounced us by its characteristic freshness. Whatever we may have lacked in knowledge, though, we were numerically the "Big" aggregation in school. The "Who's Who" of the Profs., showing at the start of the handicap a total of seventy-eight to be accounted for.

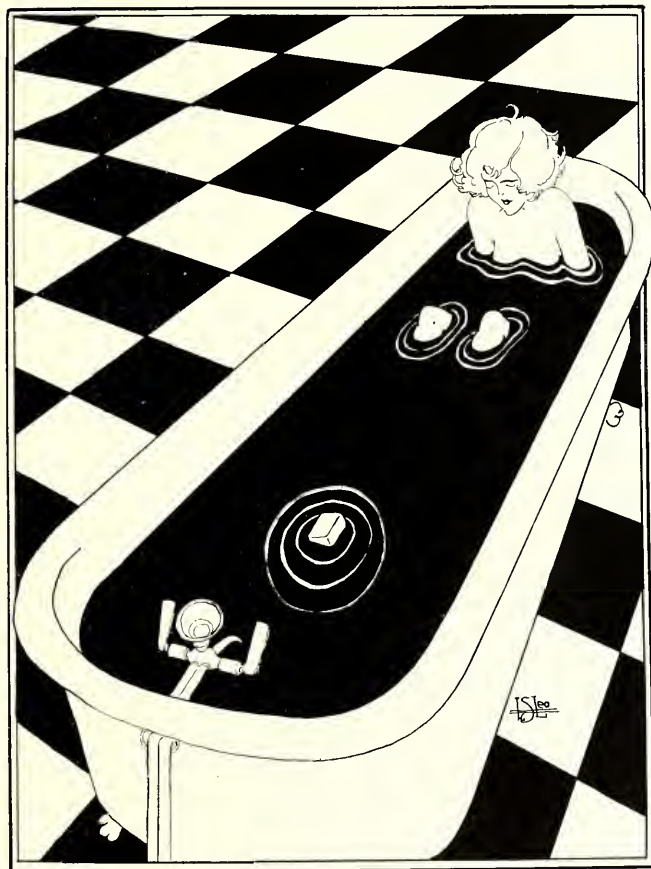

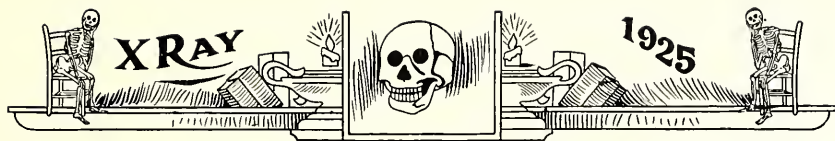

Realizing early and grimly that our immediate foes were formidable ones, plans were made for a long winter siege, with Anatomy as the first goal, and then, perhaps, by concentrated action and thought, count Biochemistry and Histology ours in time to see the June bride off.

Having had more or less extensive training in "Bones" during our pre-med days, may have accounted for the fact that Osteology soon gave way to our skilful chants. Next was not so easy, the enemy's resistance increasing progressively from the region of the "Lower Extremity" to such an extent that our force was somewhat shattered when the "Head" was grasped.

Then the cry of "On to Bio. and Hist.," led us to a baffling maze of chemical formulae and sights comparable only to the Chinese alphabet futuristic paintings. It was fun, though, now those pinchcocks for instance—but that is another story. We could also go into a discussion of how 'tis done at Cornell, but we won't.

To those who had the patience to endure and bear our ignorance, thanks are due and given, one and all. We shall always be mindful of our debt.

You Don't Have To Tell It

THEY KNOW IT

*You don't have to tell how you live each day,
You don't have to say if you work or play:
A tried, true barometer serves in the place—
However you live, it will show in your face.
The false, the deceit that you bear in your heart,
Will not stay inside where it first got the start;
For sinew and blood are thin veil of lace—
What you wear in your heart you wear in your face.
If you have gambled and won in the game of life,
If you feel you have conquered the sorrow and strife,
If you have played the game fair and you stand on first base—
You don't have to say so, it shows in your face.
If your life is unselfish, and for others you live,
For not what you get, but how much you can give;
If you live close to God in His infinite grace—
You don't have to tell it, it shows in your face.*

Daily Routine for a Senior in Infirmary

IT came to pass that a man without teeth did present himself to the scribe (Miss Clark) in the Infirmary and did beg for attention. The scribe saith, "Verily do I say unto thee, Thou must first see the great examiner. He knoweth all things and will tell thee what thou needest." He came nigh unto the examining room and went therein and spake with Dr. Wash, who so bounteously and willingly giveth out information.

The patient saith, "I would have teeth. Canst thou or thy attendants make them?" The examiner replied, "See, thinkest thou we know not our business? Thou knowest not thy needs. We will give you wise counsel and attention."

So they spaketh long together, 'til the toothless one was delivered to an attendant. On an appointed day the attendant did apply his skill to form and fashion his patient's dentures. Appointment followed appointment and the attendant's labors were long and arduous.

It came to pass that a day was set for insertion. On that day the patient findeth himself the possessor of that which his heart had desired. His heart was filled with joy. Never before had he believed it possible to build such teeth. And yea, he sang praises until the walls of the infirmary resounded with the echo of merriment. He was mightily pleased.

Dr. Holliday, the great inspector, saith, "Well done, see, thou mayest chew. Go, forsooth, and be grateful."

MARION SYLVANUS BENNETT, Ψ Ω Stormont, Va.

President Freshman Class; German Club.

"Give you an appointment very soon now."

Bennett, or "Red," as the color of his hair implies, is one of the most popular members of the dental school. His first year here was chiefly marked by a great affinity for the movies to such an extent that his frequent afternoon tardiness was always greeted with a "Red, how was the show?"

Bennett also holds the record for courting the same girl during his whole four years here. His dates are standing, and from all indications "it won't be long now." We wish him happiness.

Among the chief events of "Red's" college life was his recent trip to Dallas, Texas, representing the local chapter of his fraternity. He told us many stories of his wild experiences while there, and claims the taste of "white lightning" still lingers on his lips.

Bennett's pleasing personality and wide acquaintance among the students have won for him many friends here, and we are sorry to see him go, but we know that he is impatient to build that "house on the hill," and we bid him Godspeed.

ALBERT R. BLACK Mt. Holly, N. C.

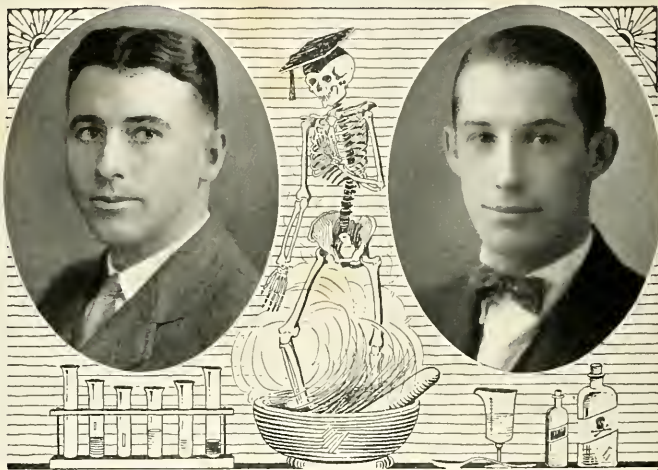

North Carolina Club; Dental Society.

"I'll do better next time."

Black has been known to us as "G. V." Knowing his sterling qualities as we do, we believe that Dr. G. V. Black, that dauntless pioneer of dentistry, would have been proud of his namesake.

Black, coming to us from North Carolina, has afforded us the opportunity of watching the transformation of a Tar Heel into a polished, professional man. We know that Carolina is about to add to her list a production of M. C. V. of which she may be justly proud.

His untiring energy, willingness to work, aided by ability to overcome obstacles, have meant success for him as a student, and we predict for him a bright and prosperous future as a dentist.

Dental Society; North Carolina Club; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet.

"Ye ole down-homer,"
 "He's from the land of the long-leaf pine,
 The summer land where the sun doth shine."

Now that you know where he's from, I'll proceed. He came to M. C. V. five years ago from Wake Forest, and after one year of carving dish from bones in the Anatomy Hall, he decided he would find some nice sweet-aired vale in eastern North Carolina where he could rest a year—in the meantime teach and allow his clothes and self a thorough airing from the exquisite aroma of the dissecting hall. Coming back after his rest(?), he settled down with but one thing paramount in his mind—a B. B. S. This, against numerous odds, he has striven for, and at last attained. Chamblee is and has been a most versatile fellow, beginning as a farmer, then salesman, teacher, student and now dentist. His qualities are many—a pleasant disposition, a conscientious mind and an unblemished character.

If he continues to develop his artistic taste and diverse talents, his success will be ensy, for of all professions dentistry is the keystone of art and versatility.

PAUL TUCKER GOAD, $\Xi \Psi \Phi$ Hillsville, Va.

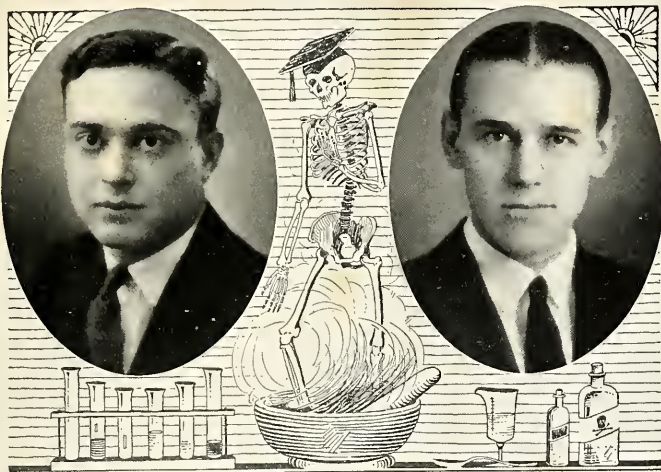

Dental Society; "X-Ray" Staff; Vice-President Student Body.

"I can't see you today."

"Tuck" moved up from Williamsburg in the fall of '21 to begin his dental career. He is an earnest, untiring worker, and has a hobby of forming opinions and sticking to them through all arguments.

He has not been classed as a "shell," but when it comes to ladies he is right there, and seems to be at home either in conversation with them or on the dance floor.

Wherever "Tuck" goes, we predict for him a brilliant future, and some locality will be benefited by a sincere dentist and a staunch Republican.

Senior Dental Class

ARCHIE RUTH Richmond, Va.

Dental Society: Vice-President Class.

"Dentists are made, not born."

Archie is a home product, coming to us after spending one year at V. P. I. He is a good scholar, his perseverance exemplifying his determination to get what he is after. We see only success awaiting him and we know M. C. V. will be proud to claim him as one of her own.

Archie always gets to class, but is usually a few minutes late. We wonder if those street cars, which get all the blame, were ever on time?

Amiable at all times, he has gained the good will of all. His quiet, unassuming manner gives him initiative and he always stands firmly on what he believes to be right.

He has a special weakness for nurses, and spends many long winter evenings at various nurses' homes throughout the city.

With you, Archie, go the best wishes of our class for a happy, successful future.

JAMES RANDOLPH SMITH, Ξ Ψ Φ Martinsville, Va.

Dental Society: Southwest Virginia Club.

"Let me sleep on forever."

Randolph came to us four years ago, after receiving his pre-dental education at Randolph-Macon College, and soon won his way to the first ranks in scholarship and popularity among his classmates.

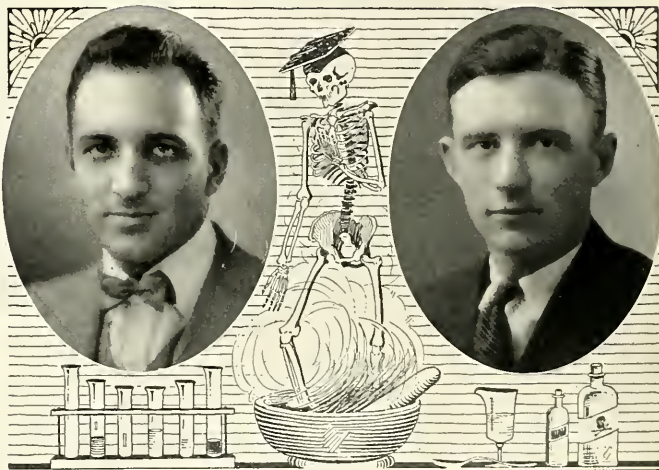

His biggest asset is his ability to accomplish the task set before him, whether it be large or small. He is always energetic and industrious, temperamental and frank.

He has the ability to think thoroughly and accurately, and this, together with his artistic temperament, will surely win for him a place of respect and honor among his fellow men.

As a dentist, he is an artist; as a man, a gentleman, and as a friend, a true one.

His ready wit and his good looks have won for him the nickname "Rudolph Valentino" among the fair sex.

Endowed with qualities that lead to success, we predict for him a bright and useful future.

Senior Dental Class

RAYMOND LESLIE WILLIAMSON Newport News, Va.

Dental Society; Tidewater Club.
"Be sure you're right and stick."

Williamson, widely known as "Jabo," is supposed to be in possession of much secret information concerning the mysterious disappearance of so many of our instruments.

Having for four years drunk at the fountain of learning at Indiana University, he came to us with a well-laid foundation on which to build his castle, "Dentistry."

Being a product of the wide West, having spent his early years wandering over East and West, through foreign lands, and sailing the seven seas, we marvel that he came to M. V., conquered the wanderer's lust, and found a home in dentistry.

Besides being a prothetist of rare skill, Williamson is a born politician. We have no doubt that success will be his.

CHARLES H. WILSON, Ξ Ψ Φ Danville, Va.

German Club.
"Another patient waiting."

"Red" is in a class by himself. As far as we know, he has never missed a dance, and no one has ever seen him with a textbook in his hand except the night before a quiz or an examination, though his grades are among the best.

Aside from eminence gained in pursuit of knowledge, he has proven himself efficient par excellence with the ladies.

We won't try to describe him, but it can be truly said he is a friend to all, a likeable fellow, and a man who will prove an honor to the dental profession. What more can be said?

Senior Dental Class History

WHEN, four years ago, few in number, we gathered here to pursue our chosen profession, we gazed into the dim, uncertain future and marveled at the day when we might bask in the sunshine of seniordom. Now that the coveted distinction has been awarded us, the goal, graduation, is approached with our hearts filled with a mixture of joy and sorrow; sorrow at the thoughts of the parting associated with the day now closing; joy, hopes, and eager anticipation to explore the contents, the treasures of the morrow.

The hours spent here were mostly filled with hard work. Ours was the good fortune of having a small class; a class of such dimensions that we might almost receive individual instruction, the benefits of which we are to reap in time to come.

Successes mingled with failures have been ours. The path, sometimes steep and rugged, has ever led onward. Our four years will soon become a page in memory's book; a page to which we hope to turn with pride. The raw material is no more—may the finished product stand the test of time.

Fully realizing the responsibilities about to be conferred upon us, we approach the bend in the road aglow with enthusiasm and confidence; enthusiastic for the days to come in which opportunity will be ours to demonstrate that our preparation has not been in vain, confidence possessed only by those believing themselves fit for the tasks before them.

As the shades of evening gather on our student days, we pause a moment with regret that it is over. With bowed heads we view the glorious sunset. With taps still ringing in our hearts, we hear the distant reveille of the coming day. Facing about, we view the gray dawn, the rising sun. A new day approaches. Our dreams have come true. We enter the school of life with a new interest, a new determination. Perhaps we aim too high. Even though we miss the mark a little, it was worth while.

Juniors

JUNIOR DENTAL CLASS

Junior Dental Class History

THE members of this class arrived in Richmond in September, 1922, as is usual with any other class coming to the Medical College of Virginia. We matriculated as usual, studied hard as usual, and had the usual troubles that any class which is not unusual usually has. The third milestone on the road to the coveted D.D.S. is behind us. This is not unusual, either, meaning, of course, that we have been here three years. Along the road to this stone marking the third mile there were many obstacles to be overcome. A list of these obstacles might be herein included, but that would not be in the least unusual. Therefore, dear reader, may it be known that this class is an unusual group of men, as evidenced by the fact that in our class history we do not include the usual list of obstacles which lay in our path. Suffice it to say that these obstacles were overcome, but not easily in every instance.

Reviewing our three years here, the thing that impresses us most is our pleasant association with one another, both in and out of the classroom. If this history does nothing more than recall some pleasant or laughable incident to the members of this class, it will not have been written in vain.

Let us have a quick roll call. Heading the roster is Lea Brooks, a hard, consistent worker. Lea takes part in all student activities, too, and is always ready to help anyone at any time. The boy is pretty good on the guitar, too. Next on the list is "Handsome" John, that big-hearted outdoor man. We'll put the O. K. on John, so "Here, y'all let this little boy alone." Remember that article that "Pop" read in the dental journal which said to use just a "teeny weency bit" of borax in soldering gold? Over in the far corner of the laboratory, working and laughing as if he thoroughly enjoyed it, we see "Fitz," that jovial, good natured boy, who never has been known to frown, and who could give the royal raspberry to anyone. And we can't forget "Oh Boy Functum," the young man from Strasburg. "Functum" is quite a critic, too. For instance: "What's this, Jew?" And now, speaking of a boy that rubs elbows with Old Lady Luck herself, there's "Lightnin'!" Yes, sir, he and Luck are buddies. Finding pocketbooks is "Lightnin's" pastime.

Everybody has a hobby. "Jimmy" Haynes is collecting dills. We 'spec' Tyler has a larger collection and greater variety of dills than anybody in school. One day when on the trail of a big dill, a man said to him: "Mr. Haynes, why is it that everywhere I go you're always right behind me?" This boy is plenty good on his technique, though, and that's no joke. "Bob" Ingram brought a broken-down cotton gin with him from Keysville and tried to use it for a dental engine. It did work pretty good, though, after he had it fixed.

And now we come to the best fighters in the class—"Pus" Jones and Chester King. For three years these two men have fought, and the result is a draw. North Carolina style of boxing was used exclusively. In fact, this is the only kind of fighting our class will tolerate. "Eddie" Myers has tossed many a goal for M. C. V., and we're proud to say that he was manager of our varsity basketball team this year. "Sleepy" Powell is a hard worker and a good all-round boy. We're glad he's with us. And "Olaf" Pulley can't be beat taking down lecture notes word for word.

When we say that "Cueball" Ratcliffe is our class president, that's enough, for we wouldn't have any but the best for president. We have a short, blood boy in our class that just can't be beat. "P. D." Somnardahl's long suit has always been pulling down the high grades. "Monroe" wrote this "history" (don't say it out loud, for his men are watching you). "Skinny" never was a slouch when it came to studies. He's a pretty good walker, too. Last, but not least, is Witherow, the man who put Galax on the map. "Galax" leaves for home December first in order to be there on Christmas day. But his home town has picked up considerably lately. It is now a stop for all trains. (Yes, both of them every month.)

We're coming back next year ready for hard work. And after that the state board. And then—but let's wait until then and talk about it.

SOPHOMORES

IN the eventful day of September 12, 1923, ten brave (and we have since realized that we were very brave or very, very foolish) young men matriculated as freshmen in the School of Dentistry of the Medical College of Virginia. Among our number there were representatives of Virginia's leading institutions of learning. With men from V. P. I., Washington and Lee, Roanoke, University of Richmond, Randolph-Macon, Hampden-Sidney, King, and William and Mary, could we be blamed for feeling that the Class of '27 would carve its niche in M. C. V.'s hall of fame?

After passing through the first few weeks, we found ourselves struggling with the mysteries of Qualitative and Quantitative Analysis, Histology, and Operative Techniques. Technical Drawing was also a source of great pleasure(?) to most of us. We soon found, however, that this was only a beginning when we undertook to master the secrets of Organic Chemistry and Anatomy. These were truly dark, trying days, and but for the assistance and forbearance of our instructors I fear that many of us would have fallen by the wayside.

Returning in September, 1924, as learned sophomores, we hoped for better things, but our hopes have been dispelled by the tales told us, by the juniors, of the evils and perils of the sophomore year. So far, we have found their predictions true of Biochemistry and Physiology, and we await, with much anxiety, the coming of the second semester, when we enter the realms of Bacteriology and Metallurgy.

It is true that we have worked, but we have also had our pleasures, and they have been many, and in later years the memory of the "old days in Richmond" will be ever sweet.

Realizing that that which is worth having is worth working for, we are determined to do our best, and by so doing to receive some day that which is most desired by every dental student—the coveted D.D.S.

FRESHMAN DENTAL CLASS

Freshman Dental Class History

IT has been said, from time immemorial, that thirteen is an unlucky number, but we, the members of Freshman Dental Class, like Einstein, have expounded a theory that disproves such a statement.

On September the seventeenth, thirteen of us entered the Medical College of Virginia with a common intention, also with different intentions. Our common intention was that we should start together and finish our course together, whereas our different intentions arose from our different views toward our work. For instance, some of us studied because we wanted to, some of us studied because we were compelled to, and some did not study at all. As in life in general, we have all had our "ups and downs" in our work this year. I shall mention a few of our studies and recall some of our happiness and sadness. First of all came our Dental Anatomy. In this course we had to carve teeth out of little celluloid blocks with files like the ones we had used at home sharpening wood saws. Many of us used at least a dozen blocks carving one set, so you can readily see our "ups and downs" in this course. In our next course, Prosthetic Dentistry, we had to take the impressions of the mouths of our fellow classmates. Our "ups and downs" in this course were upper impressions and lower impressions. Our next course was Anatomy—from the name you quickly perceive that it was mostly "downs."

We have all worked, and will continue to work, to prove our theory.

Senior Pharmacy Class

ROBERT GUY BLACKWELDER Concord, N. C.

Pharmaceutical Association; North Carolina Club.

Coming to us after he had made an enviable record at the University of North Carolina, it was only natural that he should do the same at M. C. V. He has not disappointed either the professors or his fellow students.

Although his social career is not illuminative, we like "Blacky" because he is a quiet, industrious chap, who always lends a willing ear to the other fellow's misfortunes and never fails to do all in his power to help him.

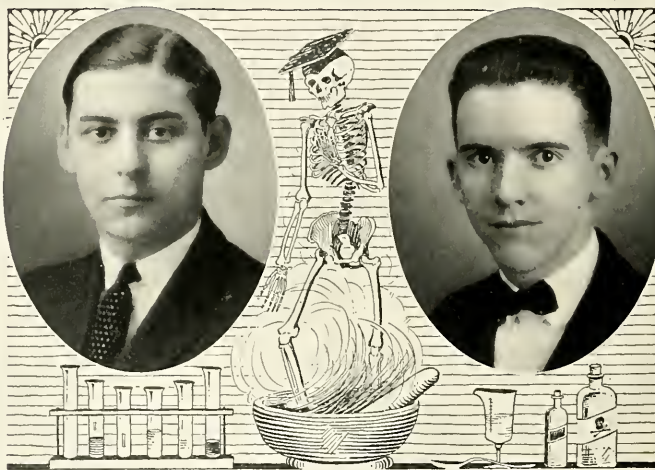

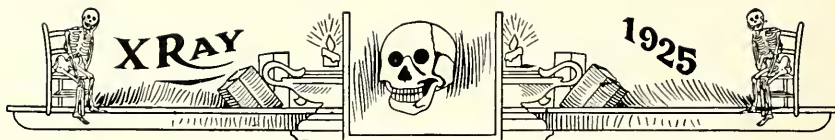

Having that quality of "Stick-to-it-ness" which is inherent in the native sons of the "Tarheel State," we know that he will carry it with him in his future life. Sorrow at leaving our Alma Mater is intensified by the loss of daily companionship with such men as Blackwelder, and here's hoping that in our future work we may be brought in contact with many of his nature and temperament.

NATHAN BLOOM Richmond, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

There are two things that an individual must possess in order to be singled out as a leader in his class. One, Personality, the ability to make and keep friends, and the other, Talent, the ability to do better what others do well. "Nat" may, without question, be counted as a class leader, because of the possession of these two qualities. Of his scholastic ability there can be no doubt, as he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to do better what others do well, and also to do that which others are unable to do, which is a true definition of genius. "Nat, what's the answer to this question?" "How do you work this problem?" are questions which may be frequently heard both in and out of the classroom. And always he lends a willing ear and a helping hand to his less gifted classmates.

Possessing such qualities to such a degree, there can be no question as to the future success of this man. It is practically assured and equally well deserved.

Senior Pharmacy Class

HARRY FRANKLIN BYWATERS Culpeper, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

Culpeper, the home of many great men, has given to the Medical College of Virginia another "genius" to add to its already enviable host.

Bywaters, besides being a remarkable student, as shown by his marked ability and scholastic attainments, also has that personality which is a natural gift to only a few of the chosen. The friendship of all of his fellow students, even his professors, makes us believe that he "shoots a wicked line."

And the "women" all we have to mention is a very few of his many accomplishments, such as playing a marvelous guitar, in combination with his sentimental eyes and coal-black hair, to show that the rest of the "sheiks" haven't a chance when he is in the vicinity.

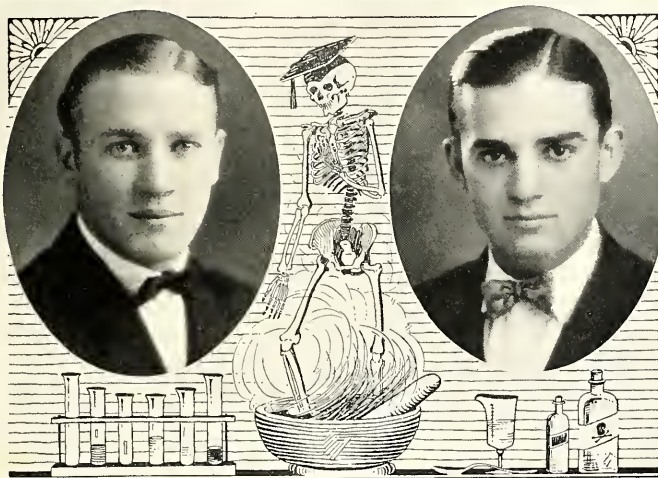

Here's hoping, ole chap, that when you leave us you will retain as pleasant memories as you have left behind, and as we know that your success is only a matter of time, all that we can wish you is happiness in your future work.

WILLIAM SIDNEY COLEMAN, K Ψ Hinton, W. Va.

West Virginia Club; Pharmaceutical Association.

"Bill" is a native born West Virginian and proud of it, if one is to judge by the way he boasts his home state, but then it seems to be in "Bill's" make-up to be a booster, for in the two years that we have known him he has always taken a big part in everything, where just a little more than ordinary pushing was needed. His sincerity, good nature, and wit are only a part of a personality that is one of the outstanding ones in school, as evidenced by his large number of friends.

"Bill" is a hard worker, and one of the best students in the class; in fact, there are not many things about pharmacy that he doesn't already know. Here's wishing you our best.

Senior Pharmacy Class

JOHN PALMER COLEY, Z A X Gate City, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

The old saying goes that "The best goods come in small packages," but an exception to the above rule is "Eddie." He is one of the best in class, best in work and first in the heart of his fellow students. If he does have a "pull" at college, he surely rates it. Why once our dean said: "Whoa, Coley, I can't argue with you; your brain works faster than mine"; and when Dean Rudd says a thing like that—well, he is plenty good, that's all.

Don't misunderstand me, he isn't a book-worm. No, he is far from that. He can drink as much—water as the next man. He prefers his "cawn" in a glass to that on the cob any time.

"He works when he works and plays when he plays."

We know that old Gate City will surely have the gate open and the city will belong to him.

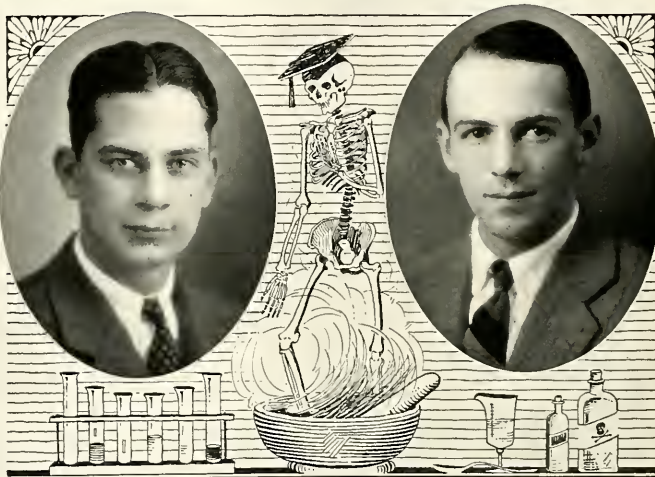

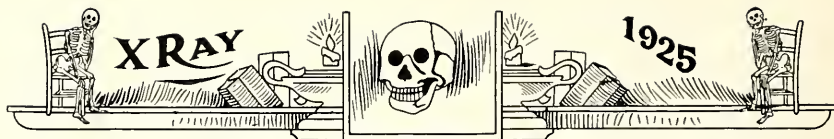

As much as old M. C. V. will miss you, and as much as we regret to bid you adieu, we wish you the same success in life that you have enjoyed in your college career. We bid farewell to "Eddie."

WILLIAM LUCK DI ZEREGA, Z A X Aldie, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Bill" came to us as a professor, having taught school one year before coming here, but for fear he might be vamped by the school girls he was forced to come to the Medical College to study pharmacy.

He is not a shark in chemistry, but a hard worker and always willing to lend a helping hand. We can't pronounce his name, so everyone calls him plain "Bill." The Class of '25 wishes him the success he will naturally win.

Senior Pharmacy Class

ROBERT THOMAS ELSEA, K Ψ Berryville, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Square and Compass Club.

"Tom" hails from the beautiful Valley of Virginia, and quite a manly looking chap is he, not a bit bad looking and just as much a man as he looks. There is always a pleasant smile on his face, and "dee!" but he is a "shlek" among the women. The art of "truck driving" came mighty close to capturing "Tom," but that longing to be a "soda jerker" got him into the drug store. As a druggist he started from the very bottom of the business, and now, after two years under Mr. Rudd's careful guidance, he is ready to go out and take his place among the leading druggists of the country.

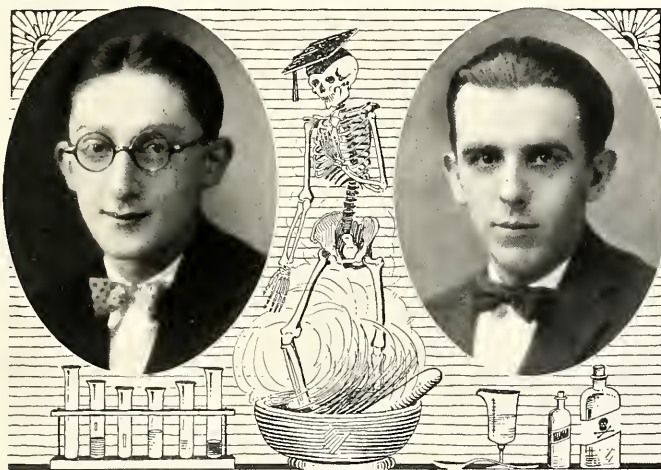

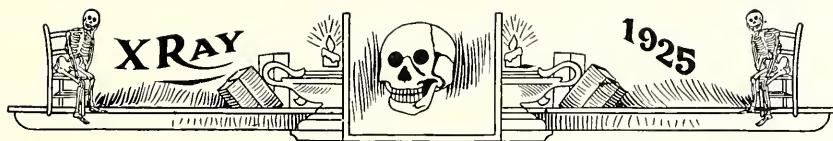

"Tom" is a jolly good fellow and quite a student, too. He had to "dig" for his knowledge of pharmacy, but he always got it and knew it well. During his two years at M. C. V., he has made many friends who will forever remember him. It is with deep regret that we must part with "Tom," but we shall always know where to find him, as we feel sure he will settle down somewhere near Winchester.

H. ANDREW GEISEN, K Ψ Pocahontas, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

This is the original "Andy"—not "Andy Gump," however, as might be supposed, but "Andy" Geisen. "Andy" has that much desired capacity of always having "something on tap" for everyone—even Mr. Rudd himself—not so bad! "Andy" has much more than this—a good head, all his own, a personality and, sometimes, a chew, and a girl besides. We more often see the chew than the girl around here though. He is not a martinet; he has the true generosity of a friend, and he is one of the few who is really a friend in every sense of this word. You can always bank on "Andy" sticking by you with all he has, and that's not such a tiny bit by any means.

To the fields of pharmacy, "Andy" and "Big Boy," we'll never forget you as one of the "Hawks"! We've enjoyed being with you, and as you go sailing through life, don't let success take your thoughts entirely away from us.

Senior Pharmacy Class

MYER HARRY GOLDSTEIN Portsmouth, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association,

The pessimist deplores the loss of such philosophers as Plato and Aristotle. But the pessimist is not aware, perhaps, of the philosopher in our midst—Goldstein—not claiming relationship to the great Einstein, but who knows what the future holds in store. The possibility of eclipsing the great is not impossible.

"Nuc," as he is affectionately called by his host of friends, is famous for his genius, satirical wit, and, last but not least, his flaming locks. He is consistently inconsistent in reiterating the statement, "Women have no charms for me," but far be it from us to prophesy that he will degenerate into the pedantic hermit that he wishes us to believe he is.

As shown by his scholastic record, his intelligence far surpasses the average, and we express the hope that his future will be as bright as his college career and his brilliant head.

GEOFFREY HEISKELL HECK, Z 1X Rogersville, Tenn.

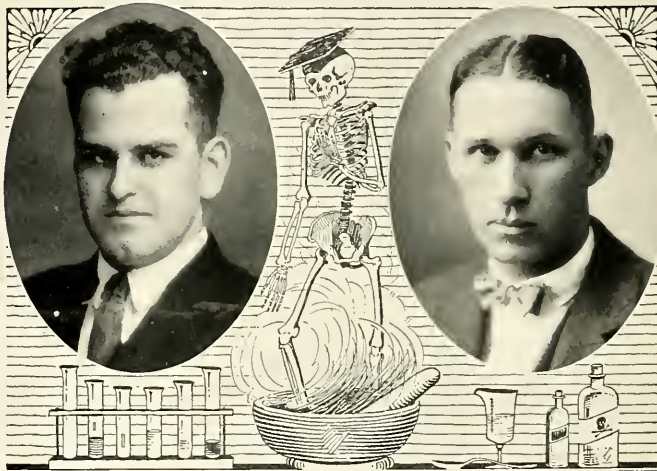

Pharmaceutical Association,

"A man among men and a god among women." He hails from sunny Tennessee, and matriculated for the first time in 1922. He did not attend school last year, but he thought so much of M. C. V. that we were honored by his presence this year. A good natured "cuss," and when once a friend, always a friend. He is always willing to do his part and help a fellow when in need. Is he studious? No! He does not have to be, because he is just naturally a genius. He isn't the best in class, but he is plenty good.

"Sheik," that's Heck;
He ain't good looking,
And he don't dress fine,
But all the girls like him,
'Cause he takes his time.

This gives us an idea as to his "sheiking" ability. They all fall for him because of his pretty brown eyes, black hair, and good natured smile. He is always the life of a party.

As much as we regret, we must say farewell to Heck. We all wish him the best of success in his chosen profession, and old M. C. V. will feel the loss of "Our Heck."

Senior Pharmacy Class

HUGH EMERSON HUDSON Scottsville, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

Hugh comes to us from Scottsville, way down in good old Albemarle county, where the James goes rolling by. It is there the sun always shines brightly and all is happy and gay. This environment seems to have imbued Hugh with a continual good cheer and friendliness, that makes itself manifest at all times. He is a conscientious, hard worker, and it is known that he can give one of Mr. Crockett's lectures verbatim, without knowing what it means. It is rumored that he is a frequent visitor to Haskins Billiard Parlor, and that he is as adept at rolling pool balls as he is at rolling pills. Hugh has a natural ability and the knack of applying himself, and we know he will attain the success he so honestly deserves.

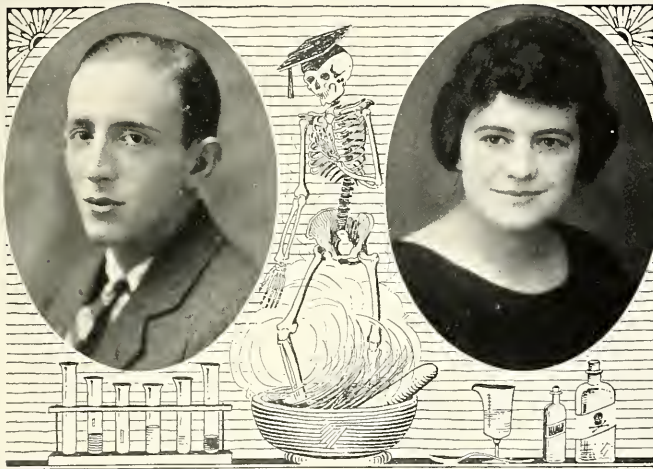

RUSSELL BECKWITH HUGHES, K Ψ Halifax, Va.

President Senior Class; Pharmaceutical Association; Class Basketball.

Behold a man! "Rusty" is unassuming, humble and enthusiastic. To summarize his character in one word, you would say "frankness." If he has an opinion, he is fearless to express it, and this has won him many friends. He came to us a leader, member of the Halifax city council, and this quality was soon proven as shown by the above honors.

His ability in handling the basketball is well displayed by his accuracy in throwing P-Ladies. "Rusty" is a well-rounded student, an athlete of no small renown, a prominent figure in all college activities, and a most enjoyable friend.

We know "you've got the stuff." "Rusty," old boy, and may the future bring to you the rewards you so richly deserve.

Senior Pharmacy Class

THOMAS WATKINS LIGON HUGHES, K Ψ Ashland, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Doc," who is known as the "Shelt" by the janitors of the Lyric building, and as "That Little Red-Headed Devil" by the John Marshall girls, came to us after having attended Hampden-Sidney and V. P. I. Being used to walking on cobblestones, he cuts a "kippy" figure on Broad Street.

However, "Doc" is a man of sterling character and is very popular, as shown by the above honors. He is a hard working, industrious chap, and will be a credit to his chosen profession. We understand he is going back to Ashland, where he will take up his life's work with father.

"Doc," we wish you the great success which you so rightly deserve, and hope to hear of you in the higher plains of pharmacy.

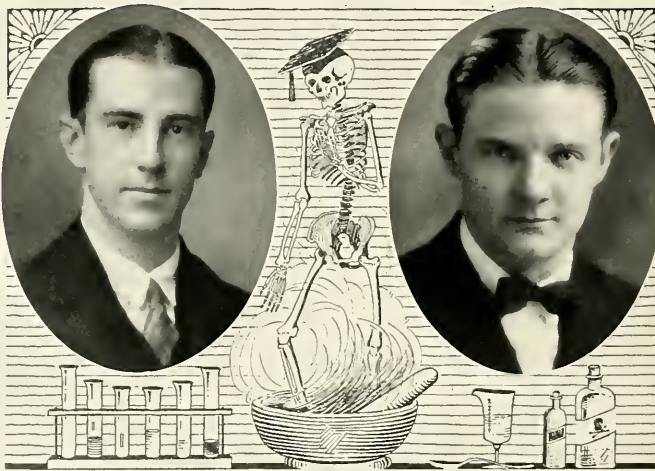

EMMA MYRTLE KRAUS Springdale, W. Va.

President Pharmaceutical Association; West Virginia Club.

Myrtle, another "mountaineer," but of the fair sex, came to us with a valuable asset, that of formerly being a teacher. It was a great loss to that profession, but it means much to the ranks of pharmacy.

Her ability as a student has been well demonstrated by her excellent standing in her classes. Although quiet and demure, she is loyal to her friends, faithful to her work, and has all the qualities that go to make up a true woman. Not "Kraut" but "Kraus," she is not as sour as her name may sound; to be brief, she is just naturally sweet.

Our sincere wishes for her happiness and success, and may they be as unstinted as her college career. The day of parting is here, but the day of forgetting will never come.

Senior Pharmacy Class

CHARLES HENRY LEWIS, H K A, K Ψ Fredericksburg, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

If the University of Virginia can keep on turning out men like "Cotton," M. C. V. would be lucky to get them all. A consistent worker, a true friend, always cheerful, and ever ready to do the things through which the school and class might benefit.

"Cotton" is one of the few in our class who possesses musical talent, and has the ability of a composer, his latest being "At the Pharmaceutical Ball." If you wish to know the schedule to Fredericksburg, call Madison 6606, and ask for "Cotton."

"Charlie" is a steady, reliable student, and a real man, making friends wherever he goes. We predict for him well merited success in the profession of pharmacy.

CECIL CURRY LIPES, Z J X Buchanan, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"A sarcastic gentle-man of his own stability." That is Cecil's own description of himself, and he lives up to his motto.

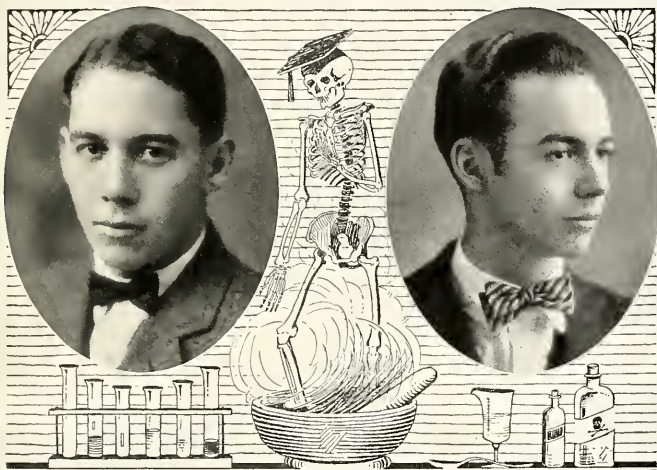

Mr. Crockett told us that peroxide was used on other things besides infections. If you take a glance at this sarcastic gentleman's blond hair, you will readily understand what he meant.

Can he talk? Whew! If talk was a gas, Cecil would be a dirigible. All the women just naturally go wild over his blond hair, blue eyes and manly figure. He is a typical "cave man," but the rougher he treats them the better they seem to like it.

He says he can handle women just like he could the ole mule down on the farm. Oh, yes, I forgot to tell you that Cecil is a farmer from the wilds of Buchanan. If he worked half as hard on the farm as he did in college, and with the same success, we know that his "dad" hated to lose him. But I'll bet that the ole mule was plenty darn glad when he left.

Why Cecil can even work Dean Rudd's chemistry problems, and it takes a darn good man to do that.

All in all, Cecil is big hearted, good natured, hard working, and is always willing to help. Old M. C. V. will surely miss him. We hate to say "good-bye," and we wish you the best of success in life. "Farewell."

Senior Pharmacy Class

JAMES HEISKELL MCNEER, JR., $\Sigma X, K \Psi$ Bluefield, W. Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Class Basketball.

"Jimmy" comes to us from the hills of West Virginia, having first spent four years at Fishburne Military School, where he proved his ability and personality by attaining ranking captaincy. He has not lost his military training, as he is fond of hiking from Highland Park in the wee hours of the morning.

M. C. V. has never sent out a man who is better liked by the faculty and respected by his fellow students than "Mac." He is a man of great capabilities, a conscientious worker, and a true gentleman—a combination which is bound to make his future a brilliant one.

"Jimmy" takes with him the best wishes of every member of his class. If he achieves half the success we wish him, he will climb high and far before he stops.

ERNEST AUBREY MURDEN, $Z \perp X$ Portsmouth, Va.

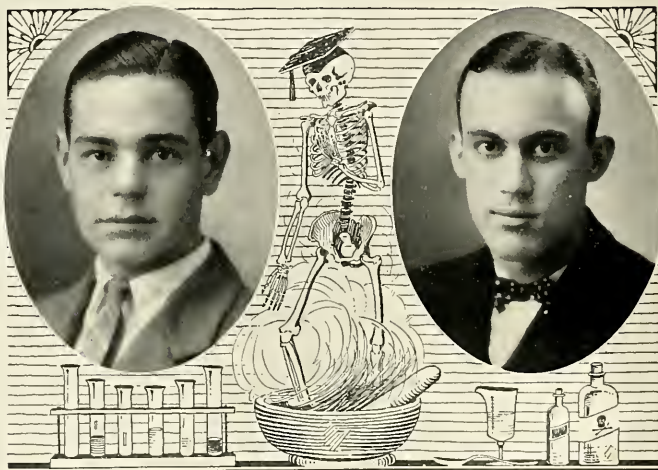

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Love 'em all, but don't lose your heart to any of them." He hails from the seacoast town, the city by the sea. He is known to us all as "Scum." He matriculated at M. C. V. in 1923. Is he a "sheik"? I'll say he is! The girls keep him out so late at night that he goes to bed early (A.M.) and gets up early (A.M.).

His schedule runs thus: Get up at 8:30, breakfast at 8:49, and slides into the classroom at one-half minute to 9:00 o'clock. The most peculiar part of it all is that he always finds time for his studies, and he knocks them cold. He is a genius in working Dean Rudd's chemistry problems. He really worked "one" last year. But all in all he knows his "stuff." He is witty, good looking, and is always ready to help a fellow when in distress.

He receives more registered letters, candy, local and long distance telephone calls than any boy in the fraternity house. The boys are contemplating putting in two extra phones for his private use. He is a man of much experience, and is just a natural born pharmacist.

As much as we regret, we must bid "Scum" farewell. Luck to you, ole boy.

Senior Pharmacy Class

WALTER LOUIS NALLS, Z A X Alexandria, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Cotillion Club.

"Bud" is a regular "Dog" with the women, and when it comes to chilling 'em on quizzes he don't miss being one of the best in the class. "Bud" swears that he is a true lover, but it's "a whale of a difference a week-end will make." He's one of them guys that has a girl in every town, but on his last trip home she mowed him down. In "Bud's" own mind his home town is the capital of the state, but the majority of us are inclined to disagree with him.

"Bud's" dates are as indispensable as his meals. In other words, he is a regular parlor athlete, but he is one of the honor graduates of his class and his Alma Mater is proud of him for the record he has made in school as well as the things he is going to do to make pharmacy a better profession.

"Bud" is one of the best known men in the school, and all who know him can but think of him as a true friend. We wish him the best of success.

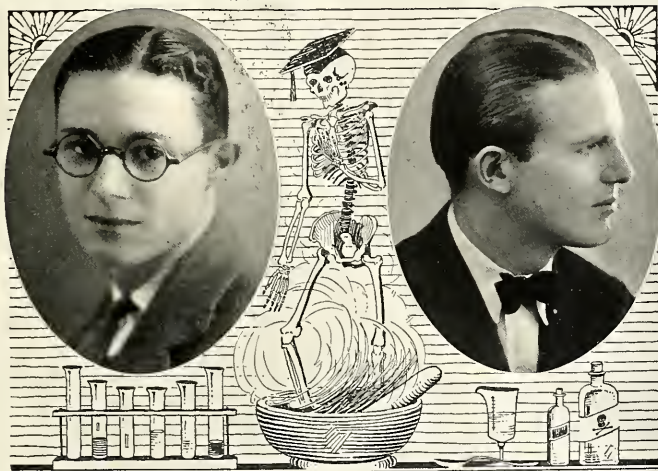

GORDON HILL PAGE, K Ψ Batesville, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

Gordon, as far as we can recall, has never missed a dance—no one ever saw him with a textbook in his hand unless it was just before a quiz or examination.

His sterling character and ever present smile have won for him many friends, not only in school, but also in the city. During his leisure hours he spends most of his time seeking a cool place to indulge in his favorite pastime, "sleeping."

"Jaundice" came to us as the best drilled cadet of Chatham Training School, and has attained an equal standing at M. C. V. From his splendid work with us success in his chosen profession is assured.

Senior Pharmacy Class

JOSEPH C. PASSAMANECK Richmond, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Joe" has the ability of day dreaming more to the square hour than any other fellow in class. Indeed, he was heard to remark one day that he must be getting insomnia, since he woke up twice during Mr. "Fack's" lectures.

However, to prove that he is a "doer" as well as a "dreamer," "Sleepy" earned the title of "U. S. P." by showing the rest of the class how to put up preparations in the laboratory. His powders especially being the envy of many a man, who "just can't seem to fold 'em right." "Joe" is also musically inclined, playing for one of the leading jazz orchestras of the city, and to see and hear his "peppy" work on the trumpet, one might wonder why he ever thought of forsaking such a seemingly easy path for one so undeniably rugged. But the answer is in the man himself.

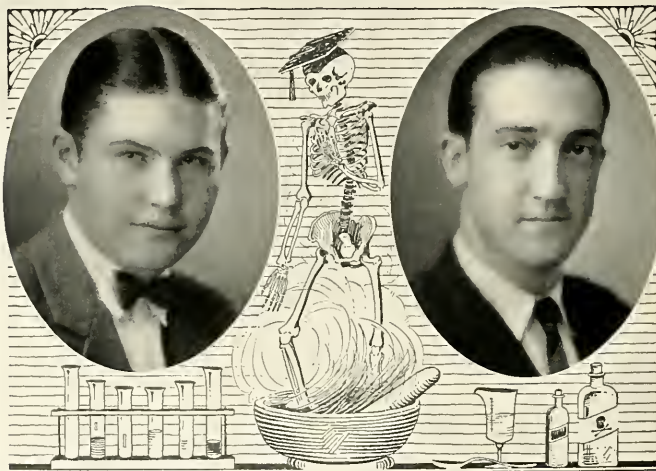

Here's luck to you, "Joe." Whether you find your life's work in pharmacy or music, we know that you will give it the best that is in you, and in doing this cannot but be successful.

JOHN MCNEIL PLANK, K Ψ Blacksburg, Va.

President Junior Class.

"Johnnie" came to us after first spending over a year at V. P. I. Either he decided that the "Old Home Town" was too dull, or the military "routine" too tame, so he came to Richmond to captivate the ladies with his charming personality and to master the more manly profession of a "pill-roller."

We all judge that he has accomplished his dual purpose. "Johnnie" has a winning personality and is popular with everyone. He has great ability, and mastered chemistry at V. P. I., but had a hard time convincing Mr. Rudd. "Johnnie" is a true friend, a loyal sport, and a "go-getter." We predict for him great success in his chosen field.

Senior Pharmacy Class

SIDNEY O. POWERS, K Ψ Coeburn, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Sid," a product and real enthusiastic specimen of southwest Virginia, is one of the most popular men at M. C. V. His sterling character, pleasing personality, lack of conceit, and ability to "mix well" have won him a host of friends. He is a favorite among the fairer sex, and plays the role of a "heart smasher." He still appears determined to remain just "Sid," regardless of the protests of his countless lady friends.

Not only does he possess the rare combination above, but he is a student of rare ability. He is prompt in doing the duties assigned to him, and takes an interest in everything pertaining to pharmacy. Few can boast of the rare ability he possesses, and we predict that few will ever pass him on the road to success.

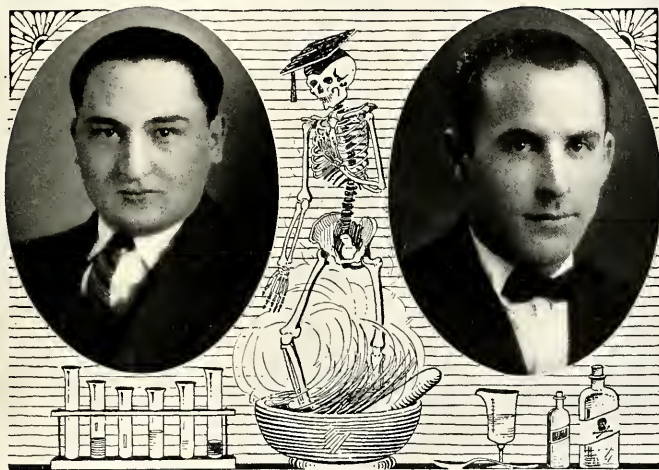

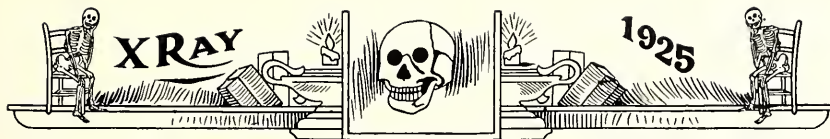

FRAZIER PRUETT Richlands, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

When the doors of M. C. V. opened in 1923, "Chick" came along with the rest of us, matriculated, and started out to learn the secrets of pharmacy. It has few secrets from him now.

Always a good student and steady worker, with superhuman perseverance, Frazier has but one course ahead of him—the road to success. But, like all others, he has one weak spot, and it is rumored that Cupid's arrow has penetrated into the depths of "Rabbit's" heart. The prognosis is "matrimony."

Our best wishes for success and happiness go with Frazier, and wherever he goes or whatever he does, our hearts will be always with him.

Senior Pharmacy Class

ALBERT B. RADMAN Richmond, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Al" is a big boy who seems to be always getting into his own or someone else's way. Besides, he would rather go to dances and the movies than to be studying, but he realized that one could not graduate from M. C. V. without some work. Despite this weakness, "Al" is serious when necessary, and usually gets what he goes after. His goal now is to become a good pharmacist, and to have as many friends outside of college as he had in it. His departure is regretted and he has the best wishes of his class for a prosperous future.

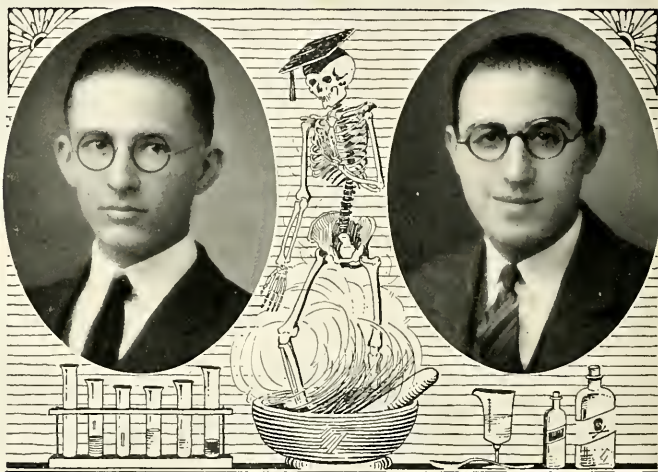

FRANK HURT REPASS, Z A X Paintlick, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Rip" is one of the few in class that will argue with Dean Rudd, but he is always convinced by the Dean that he is wrong.

He is a lady-killer of no mean ability. He is the type of man that can mingle work with play. But if business interferes with pleasure, he always gives up his business. We will not say that he drinks, but he often complains about the fraternity house steps being too narrow.

He is not only a shiek and a noise maker, but a student as well. We don't understand how he does it, but he chills the professors on any quiz—why he even made the junior work, and it takes a darn good man to do that. Some day M. C. V. will be proud to think it was honored with his presence. "Rip," old boy, it makes our hearts ache to tell you good-bye, but as all things come to an end, this is inevitable. We again say farewell and wish you best of success in your chosen profession.

Senior Pharmacy Class

THOMAS FRANK RUCKER Moneta, Va.

Quiet, industrious and energetic, what more could be said? Rucker is all this and more. When he speaks, he says something worth while, but this is rare indeed. He came to us after successfully breasting the storm of three years' labor in the enlightened atmosphere of Randolph-Macon College. His success is assured by the ease in which he mastered the "Theory of Ions" under the competent instruction of Dean Rudd. Step out, Frank, and accept the waiting reward.

NATHAN SHAROVE Richmond, Va.

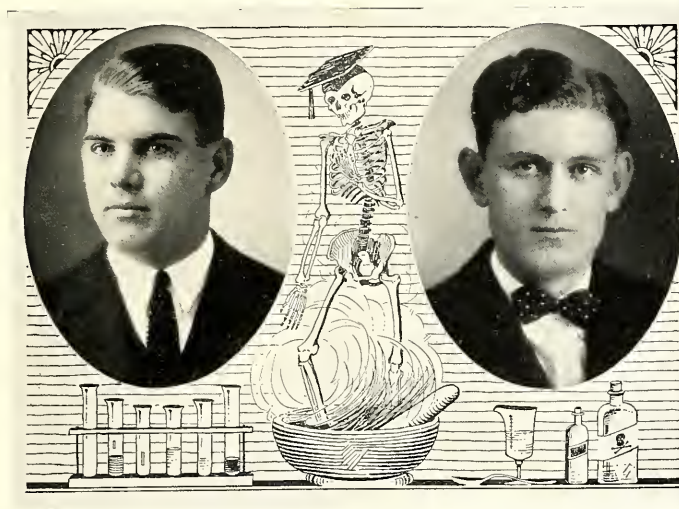

Pharmaceutical Association.

"And so I say, with Sancho Panza, 'God bless the man who first invented sleep!'"

Practically any morning will find "Nat" in all kinds of a hurry trying to make his 9 o'clock class by 9:15. He is either greeted "Good evening" at his morning classes, or "Good morning" at his afternoon class, when he walks in almost in time to answer the roll call. Nevertheless, Nathan makes up for lost time by paying strict attention in class and asking a good line of questions, intelligent and otherwise.

Jokes aside, Nathan is a man who is very sincere in all his work. He seems to possess an infinite capacity for work and a never-ending amount of energy. He tackles everything and never lets up until he has completed the task.

With his ability, manner, and personality, he cannot be other than successful, and we wish him the best of luck.

Senior Pharmacy Class

ERNEST THOMPSON SHINER Front Royal, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Class Basketball.

"Pete" came to us from Front Royal, and with him he brought a determination to do his work well. His consistent grades have won for him the respect and esteem of the entire faculty. This is but a fair introduction to "Pete" as to his real merits, for he is ever willing to help his fellow classmates. Perhaps, at times, we have taken advantage of his friendliness and unselfishness, for whenever we want a thing done well, we never fail to ask his help, and not once was that help denied.

"Pete" is not only a student, but is well represented in all college activities. His attention to the fair sex in Richmond has been limited, but from the letters he receives from the valley, "There's a Reason."

As a student, "Pete" has been most successful, and we are sure that this success will continue on into the profession of pharmacy. He is a man of high ideals, a clear thinker and a clear actor—the type of man who cannot fail to make his mark in the world.

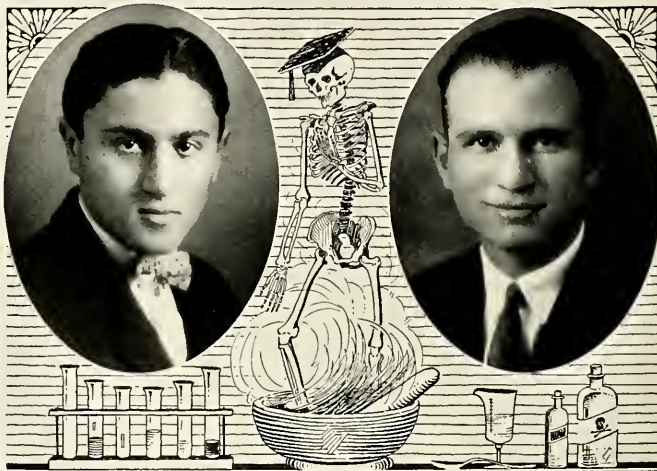

IRVIN LAWRENCE SIMPKINS, K Ψ Christiansburg, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

All street cars lead to Westhampton, and the breath of the midnight air is buoyant. "Simp" deserves much credit, for he is also specializing in a week-end course there, but he is not certain of his standing as competition is rather keen.

Simpkins is a man of noble character, his word is his bond, and he may be trusted with any responsibility, as he is industrious and ever willing to give his all. He has made a splendid record as a student, and we predict that he will write his name high in the profession of pharmacy.

"Simp" is liked and respected by all of his classmates, and we wish him good luck and a successful career.

Senior Pharmacy Class

MILTON HERMAN SNYDER Portsmouth, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Class Basketball.

Although scholarship is supposed to be a decided accomplishment, those who can be clever in the classroom and also the playground deserve twice the praise and applause given the worthy student. It is not quantity but quality that counts, and Snyder has certainly shown his qualities on the basketball courts. Always a clean player, we hope that he will carry his aggressive, winning and steadfast methods with him when he journeys forth from our midst, and we are sure that if he fights for his Alma Mater as he has done in basketball, this school will be proud to acknowledge him as a worthy graduate.

SAMUEL SOLOMON Richmond, Va.

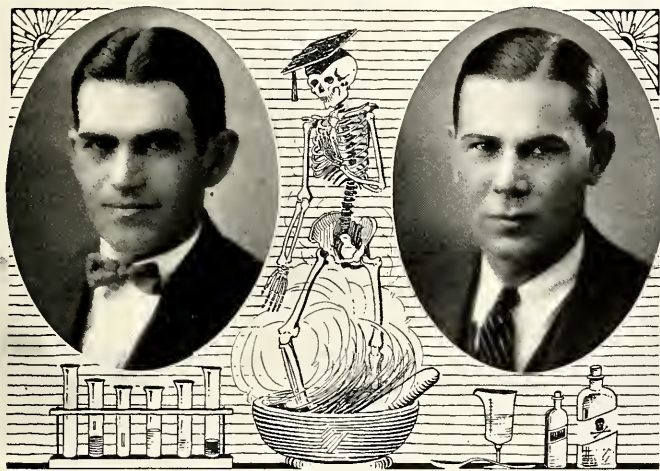

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Sammy" had really matriculated at V. P. I. and was on the verge of attending the classes there, when the advisability of an immediate operation necessitated his return to Richmond. Possibly it was the hospital environment that did it, but "Sam" began to think seriously of pharmacy and finally matriculated at M. C. V.

Although this lad has not quite the wisdom of his namesake, Solomon, we feel that such a comparison would be unfair, because Solomon had a thousand wives to teach him things, while "Sammy Boy" had to get along without even one to tell him what to do. However, he was too wise to let the "wives" put anything over on him.

"Sam" has a weakness for athletics, whether it is basketball, dancing, or other forms of wrestling. And, like all good athletes, he never mentions his games, and getting him to talk about his dates is like "doing a Kleblahl test for nitrogen."

His sunny cheerfulness and infallible good nature, his ability to take hard knocks and come back for more, his honest, sincere interest in his work, are just a few of his real assets. And knowing "Sam" as we do, we certainly expect success to crown his efforts.

Senior Pharmacy Class

JACK SPENCER, K Ψ Lynchburg, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Vice-President Senior Class.

Jack is a product of the "Hill City," and a few days after his entrance here he was known to everyone. He is a gentleman of honor, high ideals, and morals and is very popular among his classmates.

Though he has labored hard during his entire time here, and has been seldom seen among the nocturnal home-ward paraders, we have reasons to believe that his social career has been by no means neglected. He is a man of great physique, obtaining his strength by pushing a decrepit Ford to Lynchburg via "Farmville."

Jack, with the unfolding of future years, which are to change the happenings of today into the memories of tomorrow, may you achieve what you justly deserve—success.

ALLEN FLOYD TAYLOR, K Ψ Elk Creek, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

"Al," who came to us from the mountains of Virginia, is well known at M. C. V. for his good manners, big heart, conscientiousness, and act at attracting the attention of the fairer sex.

Allen is a man of noble character, with that rare combination of brains and humor in whose life the "fundamental things" govern and guide, whose word is more than a promise—it is his bond—and if he continues to live as he has at M. C. V., we are sure he will be a very prominent character in the world.

All of his many friends can truly say that it has been a great pleasure to have known "Al," and he takes the best wishes of every member of his class with him. If he achieves half the success we wish him, he will climb beyond the top round of the ladder of success.

Senior Pharmacy Class

MISS COVA THOMPSON Ferrum, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association; Class Historian.

"Tommie," the Senior Class mascot and the alumni's dear, never forgets to take with her that cheerful smile that has meant so much to us. Through her charming personality, good looks, ability to win and willingness to do her part, she has won a host of friends at M. C. V. Many thanks to fate for sending her to us, and it has been more than a treat or a pleasure to have known her.

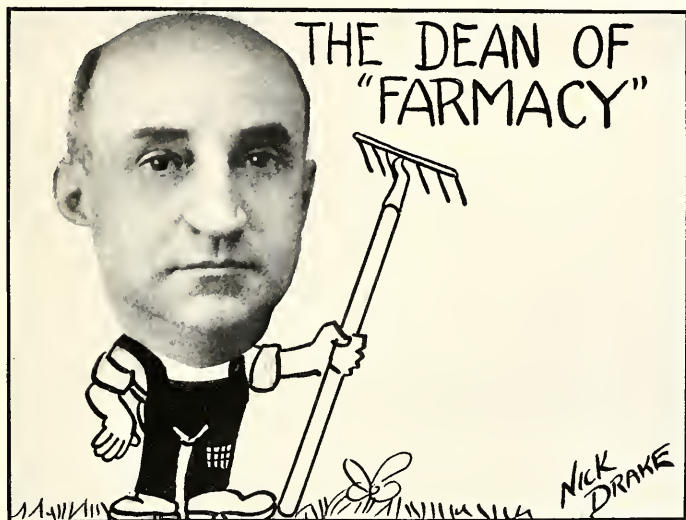

Cova is not only a good student, but also well understands the way of Dan Cupid thoroughly. "Tommie" has a keen sense of humor, she is loyal to her friends, and she possesses all the good qualities that go to make up true womanhood. Her memory will always remain in the hearts of her classmates, and she carries with her our sincere wishes for her success and the carrying out of her golden dreams.

ERNEST WILLIAMORE WILLIAMS, K Ψ Marion, Va.

Pharmaceutical Association.

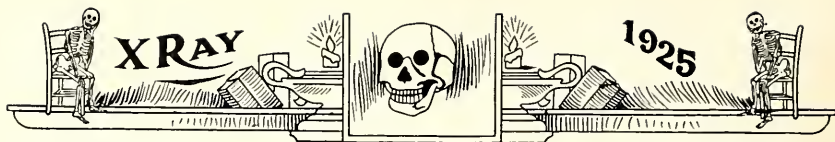

"E. W." is a typical example of the products of southwest Virginia. He is small in stature but gigantic in intellect. Always quiet and reserved, but on the alert in the classroom. "Ernie" is quite a "shik" among the fair sex—although he tries to keep his social affairs from us. However, we know that for some reason he refused to move from "110."

"E. W." is a conscientious, hard worker and no doubt he will attain a high mark in his profession. We wish you the best of success.

Sad, But True

Little Willie from his mirror
 Sucked the mercury all off,
 Thinking, in his childish error,
 It would cure the whooping cough.
 At the funeral Willie's mother
 Smartly said to Mrs. Brown:
 " 'Twas a chilly day for William
 When the mercury went down."

Senior Pharmacy Class Prophecy

EATED in my prescription room one morning, I was dreaming of the past. A clerk rushed into the room and handed me a prescription across the top of which was written in large letters that word "Stat." Immediately I began to compound it, and when the last ingredient was added a strange sensation came over me. I staggered to the couch—a hazy cloud of smoke enveloped me.

Toward me through this mystic haze came an automobile. The machine stopped, the chauffeur smiled, and I became his passenger. On looking the second time I recognized him to be "Al" Taylor himself. I told "Al" of the wonderful line of pharmaceuticals that I had prepared, and he immediately offered his assistance in helping me to advertise them.

We motored up through the Valley of Virginia, first stopping at Elsea's Cut-Rate Drug Store. On entering we were agreeably surprised to find that Elsea was none other than old "Tom." He informed us that he had not yet had the pleasure of meeting Mr. "Fack" in the back alley—but when he did—, Elsea invited us to dinner, and also wanted us to attend an evangelistic meeting held there. We were surprised to see that the evangelist was our friend, "Pete" Shiner, who had acquired fame and was fast taking Billy Sunday's place. His choir director was Franklin Bywaters.

We asked Elsea if he knew anything of the whereabouts of our classmates. He told us that "Jimmy" McNeer could not decide whether he would be most successful in Bluefield or Highland Park selling his wonderful line of "BIBS." Also that Coleman was still riding on passes, and he had not yet reached twenty-one.

We bade Elsea good-bye, and on our way to Washington we stopped at a little farmhouse to get some water. As we neared the door, we heard a familiar voice say, "By Heck!" There appeared in the doorway Lipes. Cecil had grown tired of pharmacy and had become an exploiter of "the back to the farm" movement. He invited us to rest awhile. On the porch sat Murden, still smoking the same old pipe so familiar to all of us in our senior year at M. C. V. He is now manufacturing Murden's Self-Smoking Pipes.

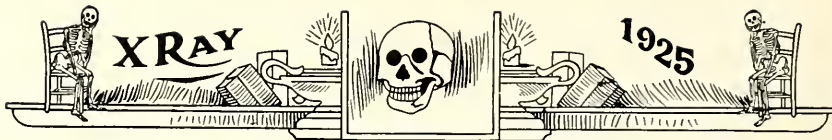

Close to his factory is the glass plant of "Bill" di Zerega, who is manufacturing large size window glass.

Lipes also told us that Professor Coley, P.D.Q., X.Y.Z., P.H.F., was now engaged in a series of constructions in France, trying to prove that a circle is square; also that Heck and Hudson were in partnership in Richmond, and that Shea had joined the navy.

We left our good friend and soon entered Washington. Here we stopped at the Raleigh Hotel. When registering we noticed the names of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Powers, Roanoke, Va. "Al" wanted to wait for his old pal and roommate, better known as "Sid." While waiting we picked up a paper and noticed a funny but familiar looking picture. Under it was the name Hampton Grey Goode, the latest world famous comedian.

Presently Mr. and Mrs. Powers entered; greetings were exchanged, and "Sid" informed us that he was now on his way to Roanoke, where he conducted a successful Rexall Store.

I asked him if he knew anything of the Class of 1925. He said that Simpkins had established a modern drug store at Westhampton. Also that Lee Lewis had discovered a noiseless chewing gum and was fast becoming famous.

Byrnes was selling patent medicine in Portsmouth, Va.

We bade "Sid" good-bye and resumed our journey. Soon we were entering New York City. I was tired and noticed an attractive little beauty shop on Fifth Avenue, so stopped. On entering, a sylph-like person met me at the door. I wondered why she looked so familiar. I glanced at her hand and noticed an M. C. V. ring, then it became clear to me who this lovely person was. She had won great fame as a specialist. Miss Kraus had kept her "school girl complexion," and now, through her efforts, others were acquiring "the skin you love to touch." She told me she was still changing her mind as in former days, and that she expected next to go to the legislature.

She also stated that she had a long letter from "Doc" Hughes, and he was still in Ashland jerking soda for his father.

We left Kraus and turned our course southward along the eastern shore. Presently we passed a large field of peanuts. We recognized Radman, and he informed us that he had at last discovered a method by which he could grow salted peanuts.

He told me that his friend, Snyder, after many months in St. Luke's Hospital, had at last recovered from falling into a bottle which he had left open while compounding a prescription, and that Sharove had acquired fame by painting "The Palmolive Soap Girl" for magazine advertisements.

Bloom, Goldstein, and Solomon had become famous as classic literature critics.

Passamaneck had at last reached his highest ambition. He was now playing in the orchestra at the "Isis."

Perlstein had at last learned when the Jewish holidays came.

From here we motored into North Carolina and stopped at Blackwelder's Drug Store. He had been successful in the drug line, and was now manufacturing per-simmon beer as a side line.

He told us that Page was now working in Martinsville, Va., and of his wonderful success selling E. W. Williams' Hair Restorer, having been tried out on Sharove and C. H. Lewis. Also that Rucker had specialized in penmanship, after having taught Mr. Fackenthall for several years.

Geisen had discovered a colorless chewing tobacco.

W. L. Nalls was a henpecked husband, and lived at Alexandria, Va., where he owned a cut-rate drug store.

After bidding Blackwelder farewell, the next point of interest at which we stopped was Lynchburg. Here I learned that Jack Spencer was now a traveling representative of the Lynchburg Chamber of Commerce, trying to prove that Lynchburg was the best and only place in which to live.

While waiting for "Al" to have the car repaired, a newsboy came along. To make time seem shorter, I purchased a paper. Glancing down the column I noticed in the Halifax news: "Mr. Russell Hughes has permanently replaced the 'Old Booker Chicken' in the Johnson's Family Garden." Also in North Tazewell news: "Mr. D. W. McGuire is afraid to extend his honeymoon to Richmond on account of the girls he will meet."

On the next page I noticed that F. H. Repass, internal revenue officer, had the sad duty of reporting Plank & Pruett Pharmacy short two gallons of alcohol and five pints of Old Foster.

By this time the car was repaired and we turned our course toward Richmond.

Suddenly I opened my eyes and looked around; there lay the prescription untouched. I began to figure out just what had come over me—I had been with my dear old Class of 1925 in a vision instead of reality.

Junior Pharmacy Class History

HISTORY has always represented the results of the carrying out of an ideal. The history of the Junior Pharmacy Class will be, when finally written, the results which have been achieved through our efforts to attain the ideal we have set for ourselves. But this time is not yet. But we, as a class, are striving to make history in such a way as to attain our goal. We may fail, but even if we do, we have profited by our efforts to exceed the accomplishments of our predecessors.

We are a paradox. We are a unit, and we are a multitude. Each of us has our personal aims, desires, and foibles, and we differ mildly, and for this we are thankful.

We have one ambition—the record we are to leave behind us. Our determination to subordinate our individual whims to the accomplishment of our aims makes us a unit, and for this we are grateful.

We might include a list of who we are, and where we came from, but what does it matter? We are here; that is enough for the present. That we were here and what we do belongs to the future.

It is our hope that the future will record that Pharmacy, that M. C. V., that we ourselves will all have greatly benefited by our first experience in making history.

The Nurse and Her Prayer

*The world grows better year by year
Because some nurse in her little sphere
Puts on her apron and laughs and sings
And keeps on doing the same old things.*

*Taking the temperatures, giving the pills
To remedy mankind's numberless ills;
Feeding the baby; answering the bells;
Being polite with a heart that rebels.*

*Longing for home, and all the while
Wearing the same old professional smile;
Blessing the newborn babies' first breath;
Closing the eyes that are still in death.*

*Taking the blame for the doctor's mistakes;
(Oh, dear, what a lot of patience it takes!)
Going off duty at seven o'clock,
Tired, discouraged, just ready to drop.*

*But called back on "special" at seven-fifteen,
With woe in her heart, but it must not be seen.
Morning and evening, noon and night,
Just doing it over and hoping it's right.*

*When we lay down our caps and cross the bar,
Oh, Lord, will you give us just one little star
To wear in our uniform caps so new,
In that City above where the Head Nurse is You.—Amen.*

SENIORS

Senior Class

LEONA MYRTLE ALLEN Sanford, N. C.

"Little Mokus"

"She never troubles trouble unless trouble troubles her."

Leona May used to be a Tarheel schoolmarm, but she decided to become an R. N. and so entered the Class of '25.

It won't be long now, though, before she will not only acquire the R. N., but will attain the title, "Mrs. B. W."

Nothing worries May; she's happy as the day is long. She may be most married, but she's the biggest flirt in the class and has sent many a swain away with a fluttering heart.

May is a lovable girl with a jolly disposition, making friends at every turn. We wish her the greatest success and happiness possible for anyone to achieve. And we know that wherever she goes she will render the best service that is within her.

VELVIE CLARK Wilson, Va.

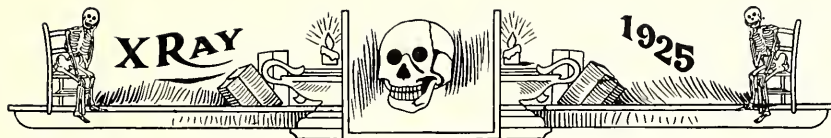

"Felix"

"Not too sober, not too gay.
A rare good fellow in every way."

Clark should have been a farmwife, but as she did decide to become a nurse, she will certainly be a success, as she is in everything she undertakes. Quiet and studious, she leads the class in grades. Clark is a good sport, always ready for play, but when the time comes for hard work she is right there.

Clark has not fallen for any of the male sex yet, but who knows when she will; you never can tell about these quiet damsels.

A true friend, untiring student, and a good fellow, she has won a host of friends among supervisors and students alike. A brilliant future awaits her in the life work she has chosen.

Senior Class

ROSA BELLE COUCH Lebanon, Va.

"Rosa B."

"All we want is to be left alone."

Behold, ladies and gentlemen! Step right up front, don't shove, room for everyone. Allow me to introduce Rosa B. Couch, a product of Lebanon, Va.

Rosa B., while among us, has proven herself to be a dignified, hard working nurse, performing her duties, wherever she found them, courageously and without fear. Dignity has been her middle name, but she did condescend on one occasion to throw off such an atmosphere, and startled us by showing how a French modiste dressed her hair in "Gay Paree."

Here's luck to one who is always ready to assist, who faces her duty with a smile and, above all, has a woman's heart.

ALICE VIRGINIA CROSS Petersburg, Va.

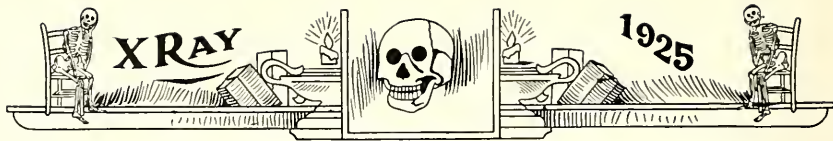

"Alice"

"Eat, drink, and be merry,
For tomorrow we diet."

Alice hails from Petersburg, and most any Saturday afternoon you may find her at Murphy's waiting for the Forest Hill Park car, on her way home for the week-end.

Alice's great failing is a fondness for pickles and peanuts.

She is the favorite of the class, and rightly so, because she always has a cheery smile and doesn't know the meaning of "fussing." "Boy" is out of her vocabulary—her heart is still free from their snares. There is no doubt as to Alice's success in the nursing profession, and she will certainly be a credit to this honorable calling. Luck to you, Alice!

Senior Class

FLEDA HARRELL Eure, N. C.

"Mrs."

"What is a woman if she's not a mystery?"

Another Tarheel for Memorial to be proud of. Harrell is the most dignified member of our class. But at times she lays aside her dignity and lets one know how really nice she can be.

Tell her a secret, and it's as safe as if told to the Sphinx. A truly wonderful friend and a girl with a character to be proud of. Always the same, and with manners that ring true. So will eventually return where all the Tarheels go, and carry with her the love and respect of all who knew her in old Virginia.

MARY LOUISE HEYWARD Pineora, Ga.

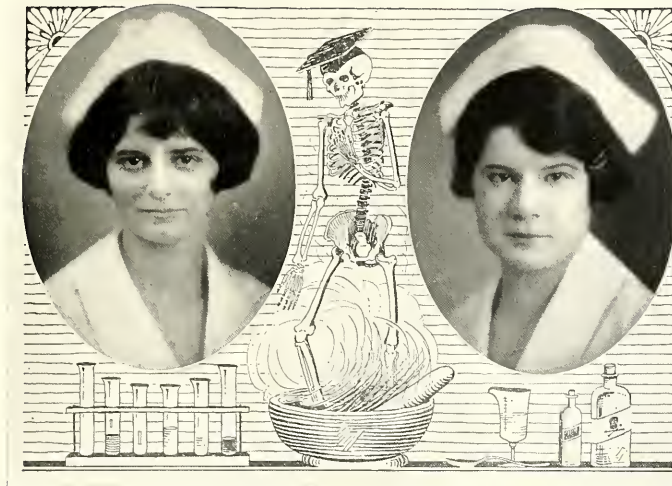

"Peaches"

"A merry heart and true blue,"

Yes, that's Mary exactly. Nothing daunts her. If things go wrong, somehow she'll manage a winsome, cheerful smile.

When Mary came to us she was just a shy little maid, but now she's a regular vamp. The Internes are all ensnared by her smiles, as well as the supervisors. We unfortunates would like to learn the prescription and use as directed.

One who has the fight and determination that Mary has is bound to be a success in whatever she may undertake, and we bid her Godspeed on her way.

Senior Class

MARY ERMINIE MARSHALL Pamplin, Va.

"Little Bit"

"Sometimes I think, and then I am in pain
To think how to unthink that thought again."

"The bird what said that the best things come in small packages certainly know his berries." "Little Bit," or "Midget," as she is usually called, hails from Pamplin, Va. Where that is no one has been able to ascertain, but wherever it is it must be a good place to be from. It has produced the smallest and at the same time one of the most efficient members of our class.

"Little Bit," aside from dreaming of a love nest, has been able to earn for herself the reputation of being one of the hardest workers, most studious(?), and most efficient nurses in class.

If a winning smile, happy disposition, and a kind word mean anything, "Midget" is destined to be a great success, a credit to herself and to the Class of 1925.

ORA LEE PERKINSON Petersburg, Va.

"Perk"

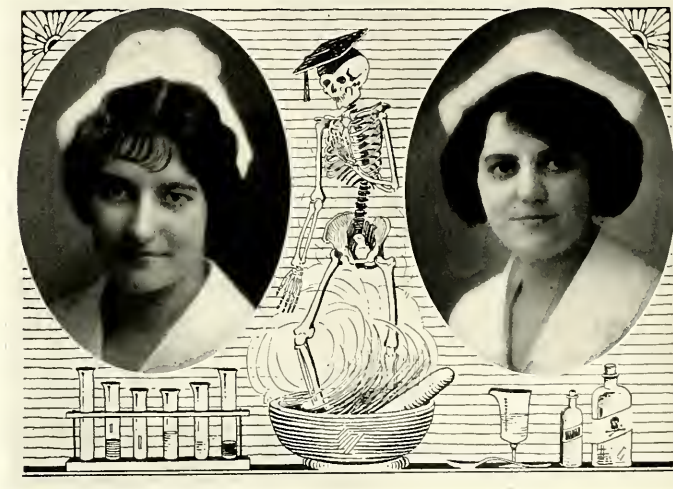

"What is life without love?"

This, the shining light of our class, came to us in 1922 from the historic town of peanuts and of the Crater. Not only has this light been of the physical variety, but also in the classroom and class activities.

We have been told that opposites attract each other, but from recent events we are prone to discredit this. As we have observed, "red has attracted red," and great has been the attraction thereof. From morn 'til night, all we can get out of "Perk" is "Red said this and Red said that." What the "this" and what the "that" is we do not know, but it must have an awful kick to upset one so stately and robust as "Perk" is.

Now to the more serious side of "Perk's" sojourn with the Class of 1925. She has proven herself to be worthy of her mettle; in the sickroom amongst the suffering, in the classroom amongst the studious, in the dance room amongst the gay—she seems to fit in every environment. All in all, she is a hundred per cent girl. With her natural attributes and those acquired while in training, success in her chosen profession is assured.

Here's luck to you, "Perk"! The Class of 1925 is pulling for you.

Senior Class

KATHRYN CORLEY PRICE Petersburg, Va.

"Village Lame"

"Treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing."

To talk with Corley one would think that she were a regular man-hater, but don't let her fool you like that. Just send her a blond, and she will certainly fall for him, and with a loud thud, too. She declares she will be an old maid and adopt twelve babies, so if any are found on your doorstep, be sure to send for Corley to help you in your difficulty. She stands at the tip-top notch of the class in her studies, and we know that, with the qualities she possesses, a long, successful career in her chosen profession awaits her. She takes with her the very best wishes for her success from the Class of 1925.

LYRA VIRGINIA RANSOM Richmond, Va.

"Dignified Mama"

"Then she will talk! Ye gods, how she will talk!"

Ransom is our all-round star pupil, an artist and a poet combined. A deep thinker and an efficient nurse. We are proud that she is a member of our class. But with all that Lyra V. is a mighty good sport, and you just ought to hear her talk of her midnight rides in coupes. And she's a friend worth having. If you need a nickel, ask Ransom; if you are in a scrape, go to Ransom, she'll get you out.

We never know what she's going to say next, and in our lectures we always hold our breath in expectancy when she begins to recite. She's ruined many a serious lecture by her brilliant, untimely remarks or questions.

We all love Lyra and know that wherever she may go success will tag along with her.

Senior Class

WINIFRED MARTIN SHELTON Clifton Forge, Va.

"Winnie"

"I seem a saint when most I play the devil."

"Winnie" is "X," the unknown quantity in the Class of '25. Sometimes she'll smile at you and then again you aren't sure whether she really did smile or not. "A law unto herself," that's "Winnie."

One of the most efficient and hard working members of the class. Her floor is always the cleanest and the work goes more smoothly there than on any of the others.

"Winnie" has had but one love affair and seldom deals with the deeper affections of the heart.

With you, "Winnie," go the sincerest wishes of our class, for you have all the requisites of a most happy and successful future.

MABEL CLAIR WHITLOCK Emporia, Va.

"Whit"

"They all fall for me."

"Whit" is pretty and knows how to use her charms on the opposite sex to good advantage. Every six months "Whit" sports a new frat pin and declares it is "really serious this time," but we know that she's just "stringing" along another one until one a little more attractive makes his debut.

But she knows how to study as well, and never lets beaux cause a bad grade in her classes.

With the unfolding of future years that are to change the happenings of the present into shadowy memories of tomorrow, may she realize her greatest ambitions.

Senior Class

JOSEPHINE WOODSON Charlottesville, Va.

"Joe"

"He who slingeth the bull easily ropeth the cow."

When we need good advice we always go to Joe. She has a goodly stock of worthy suggestions and is quite ready to hand them out. If we practiced them more we would by now feel miniature wings sprouting. But after all, "Joe's" a pretty good sport. She'll even go car riding if you'll beg quite hard and make her understand the party is quite respectable 'n' everything.

"Joe" hasn't suffered from the sting of Dan Cupid's arrow yet, but we are still hoping for results of the little archer.

We predict a great future for her in her chosen career, and she takes with her our hearty good wishes.

Nurses' Class Will

WE, the graduating class of 1925, would fain linger a few moments before crossing the threshold of our long-coveted desires, and leave to those behind us a few of our cherished belongings.

We open our strong box and take from its depths our wishes for a new nurses' home. This we leave as an urgent reminder to our superintendent, Mr. Morlok, with a secret longing that he will not brush it aside as unworthy to keep and ponder upon in his moments of spare time.

Ah, here is thanks for the pleasures we have had in the Y. W. C. A. privileges. These we leave to both Mr. Morlok and Miss Reitz, and may they keep them and cherish them always as recipients of the Class of '25.

What is this we see? Oh, Ambition. This we leave to the nurses of Memorial, and we sincerely trust you may keep it ever before you, to be a stepping-stone to your success.

We find at the bottom of our treasure chest Dignity in Class, which we proudly hand over to the "probes." Be sure you use it when Miss Mew is near, and of a surety your report cards will show the result.

Appreciation protrudes from the lining of our chest, and this we leave to all who have in any way helped us along the half-weary, half-pleasant road to success.

We close our treasure-cove with many a fond pat and backward smile to you all. The Class of 1925 crosses the border into the land of R. N.'s.

A SUBJECT FOR REFLECTION

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Intermediate Class History

EVERYTHING has a history. The history of some things is written and preserved, the history of other things is merely told, while the history of still others is worth neither the writing nor telling.

Although there may not be much to say of our history in this school, we expect our class to make real history in the years to come.

Here is the beginning of the history of the Class of 1926, which I feel is worth writing, but unfortunately I can relate only a few of the more important details and events of the two years we have spent in the School of Nursing. The most important parts of our class history can be neither written nor told, because they consist of a transformation in the minds of the members of this class under the skilful, patient leadership of faithful, earnest instructors.

As for our "Prob. Days," we were too young and gay to care for a history. The greatest event of our first year was the presentation of caps and bibs—at the end of our four months "Scrubbing," and no graduate was ever more proud of her white uniform than we were of our caps and bibs.

Overwhelmed with joy that we were no longer "Probationers," but verdant first-year students, we felt that our lives had just started on an upward climb to higher and better things. We started the year aright by electing Miss Esther Kerr as president.

We were a larger and more noisy class then, but as time passed members came and went. The most serious minded ones stayed on, filling Old Memorial with sunshine and cheer, working the best our young hearts knew. We are the largest, youngest group of nurses that ever trod the halls of Memorial Hospital. From the beginning we entered our work with true class spirit and loyalty. Our class has shown its interest in its work and studies by records made. Each and every one has realized the great importance of the step she has taken to be a nurse.

At the beginning of our second year, we elected Miss Pearl Hylton president of the class, and selected our class motto and colors. Our motto, "Nil Desperendum," is expressive of the ambition and desire of each member of our class to be of some real service to our Alma Mater and to our country by shaping aright our lives in the beginning.

It has been our privilege and honor to be among the first of the Memorial nurses to become members of our own Y. W. C. A., and we hope that the classes of the future will receive an equal benefit and inspiration from this organization.

Three of our members are members of the Student Council, two hold important offices in the Y. W. C. A.

HISTORIAN.

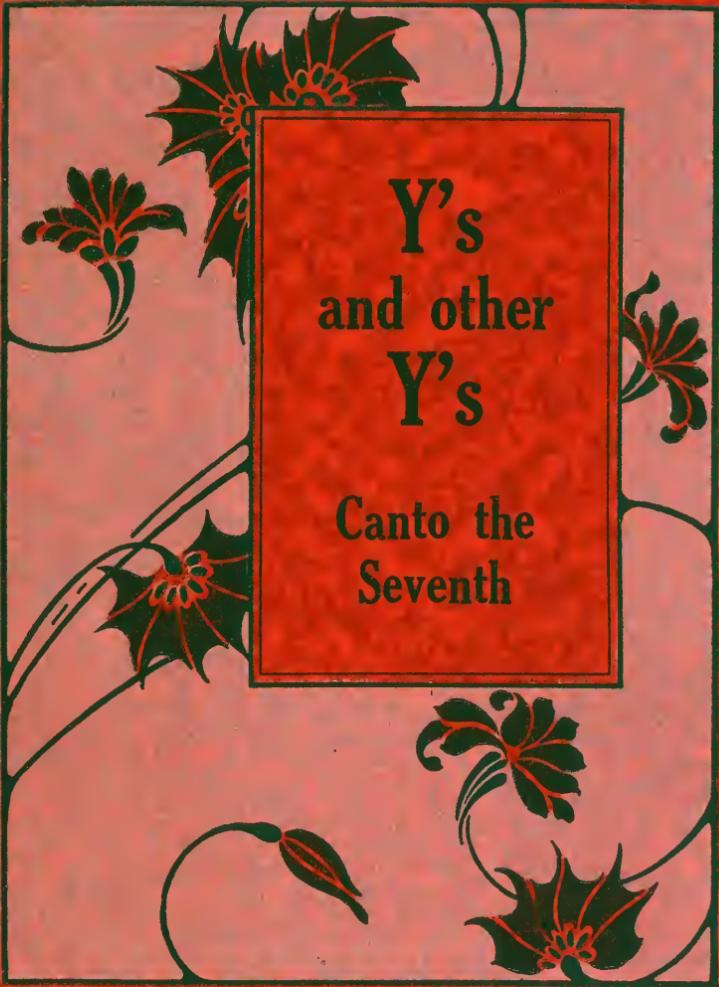

Staff Poem

*The world is old, but likes to laugh,
New puns are hard to find.
The greatest editorial staff
Can't tickle every mind.
So if you read some old-time joke
Patched up in modern guise,
Don't fuss and say the thing's a fake,
Just laugh—don't be too wise.*

*We die but once, and we Die without distinction if
We are not willing to die
The death of Sacrifice.
Honor and distinction come only
As rewards for Service to Mankind.*

A Man's Prayer

¶ Teach me that sixty minutes make an hour, sixteen ounces a pound, and one hundred cents a dollar.

¶ Help me to live so that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I may have brought pain.

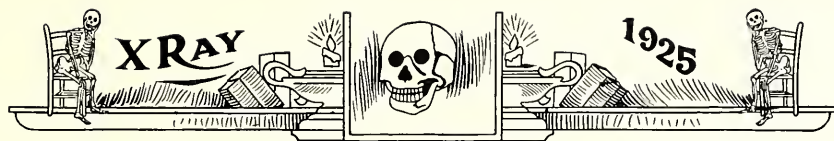

¶ Grant that I may earn my meal ticket on the square, and in earning it I may do unto others as I would have them do unto me.

¶ Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money, blind me to the faults of other fellows, and reveal to me my own.

¶ Guide me so that each night when I look across the table at my wife, who has been a blessing to me, I will have nothing to conceal.

¶ Keep me young enough to laugh with little children, and sympathetic so as to be considerate of old age, and, when comes the day of darkening shades, make the ceremony short and the epitaph simple—

"Here lies a Man."

My Fraternity

If I were asked what in this world should be
Unharm'd eternal when that fire shall sear
Man's creations, the fond palace we rear
And all that's in the broad expanse of earth,
The world destroyed, charred, wilted, ghastly death,
I'd say that thing unharm'd is my fraternity.

Thy spirit is immortal as the Trinity,
Thy life is measured by ages, not years,
Thy dauntless courage shows no fears,
Thy mission, as the ages onward roll,
Is linking in friendship soul and soul:
Eternity is thy goal, O my fraternity.

Symbolic of this life's truest unity,
Emulating the spirit of God's Son,
Nurturing harmony, brotherhood, where one
Is linked with all to better all,
To guide, protect, to shield against the fall;
Thus art immortal, O my fraternity.

E. A. A., '25.

Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, Sociologist

DR. KATE WALLER BARRETT
Zeta Geiker

When the Governor of Virginia has the task of selecting a woman to represent the state or of appointing a woman member on a state commission, invariably the honor falls upon Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, who is known among philanthropists and sociologists all over the world.

Because she is almost as well known among the women's organizations of Europe as in this country, it is an interesting fact that in the early years of her life Dr. Barrett was reared in the carefully guarded surroundings of an old Virginia estate, and until her marriage at eighteen was never permitted to venture so far from home as the Stafford county courthouse, only eleven miles away. For a young woman destined to become one of the foremost sociologists of the country, this was intolerable bondage.

Boundless interest in life, and the desire to see and learn, are her outstanding characteristics. When the young rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church proposed marriage to the eighteen-year-old girl, she consented conditionally. One condition was that the bridegroom take her to see the courthouse, and the other was that he should take her to a circus. With both promises fulfilled immediately after marriage, she turned her mind to more education, and in this pursuit she was encouraged by her husband, the Rev. Robert South Barrett, who was for many years the dean of the cathedral at Atlanta, and the author of one of the outstanding religious books of the '90's, "The Reason for the Hope." Her few years in the Arlington Institute of Alexandria failed to satisfy her desire for knowledge, a desire that has not been satisfied yet, and Dr. Barrett is nearly sixty-seven years old and is considered one of the best-informed women in the country, especially on immigration, public health problems, and the welfare of women, children, and disabled soldiers.

With a keen interest in public health and welfare, as well as the usual mother's interest in the health of the members of her own family, Dr. Barrett in early life went to London to take a course of nursing in the Florence Nightingale Training School in St. Thomas' Hospital. That did not satisfy her desire for knowledge in that line, and she resumed her studies at the medical school of the University of Georgia, where she received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1892, and the honorary degree of Doctor of Science in 1894.

Though she has long been interested in public welfare, Dr. Barrett has made only one venture into politics, and that was when she became a member of the Virginia delegation to the last National Democratic Convention, where she seconded the nomination of Carter Glass. Her one venture into politics was due to her great admiration for Carter Glass, and not to any desire to become a politician.

Her speech stirred the convention at the end of a long and tiresome afternoon session, which had overflowed with long nominating addresses. Her ire had been stirred earlier in the convention by remarks made by some of the speakers, notably Mayor Hylan of New York, about Wall Street, and she made that her topic. She pointed out that a Wall Street, or financial center, was needed in any country. She expressed the opinion that Wall Street and Main Street were interdependent and that the prosperity and security of the business houses along Main Street in any average American town depended upon the prosperity and security of a Wall Street.

Her speech continued only a few minutes, hardly more than five, but among all those other voluminous speeches it was a gem too small, and the convention demanded more. Opera singers get encores, but rarely are orators called back. Dr. Barrett returned again and again, but she "showed she was a woman of discretion by responding merely with a bow. Her gallant bearing and resounding voice won this convention, which was so tired that an ordinary speaker would have evoked nothing but boos."

Though not a politician, Dr. Barrett has accepted three missions from the Bureau of Immigration of the Department of Labor, and in 1914 and 1919 she went to Europe to investigate conditions, particularly those surrounding alien women. She became interested in immigration through the work of the Florence Crittenton Mission, of which she was vice-president and general manager from 1897 to 1909, and of which she has been president since 1909. During the Roosevelt administration she worked for the enactment of the law creating a special zone of protection around alien girls recently arrived in this country. President Roosevelt finally signed the bill, but it was declared unconstitutional. Undismayed, Dr. Barrett and her supporters kept after Congress until the Mann Act was passed, embodying many of the features of the first bill.

Dr. Barrett does not share some of the radical views of other women about the decay of the American home and the increasing sophistication of youth; she does not believe that the country is sliding to perdition at a high rate of speed. One cause for the "age of sophistication" of youth, she believes, is that modern education has caused the knowledge of youth to outstrip its experience, and the result is a hitherto unknown scale of precocity.

Her vast experience with welfare organizations has caused her to form one other opinion about the youth of our day, and it is, indeed, a startling observation. It is that the young men of today, up to the age of thirty, and in some cases beyond that mark, are nearer perfection in conduct, morals, and ideals, than was any other similar generation of young men in the history of this country, even in the history of the world. She believes that the heroism of the soldiers who served in the war has raised the minds of the younger generation of men to ideals never before attained.

Exactly the opposite fact has been noticed among young women. Perhaps because of the relaxation of the old discipline, with the entrance of women into industry and all kinds of work required by the war, the "age of sophistication" has hit the young women harder than either the young men or the women of advanced years. Girls are reaching advanced ideas at more tender years than ever before. But Dr. Barrett believes in facing the facts; she does not indulge in flights of pessimism; she thinks that stabilization will come among the young women and that in a few years they, too, will enter an idealistic age of youth, where newly acquired knowledge or new ideas will not overwhelm high ideals.

Even with her multifarious public duties, Dr. Barrett spends a large part of her time with her family. She has three sons and three daughters, and fourteen grandchildren. When her husband died in 1896, the youngest child was only three years old, and she faced the task of rearing her family alone. But on the deathbed, her husband had courageously finished his work on "The Reason for the Hope," with Dr. Barrett acting as amanuensis. In this adversity and under the inspiration of the context of the work and its courageous accomplishment, she conceived her own philosophy of life, which, she says, has these three fundamentals: "Bread, Beauty, and Brotherhood."

Her ceaseless activity and her boundless mental and physical energy cause her to take part in so much public work that it would require a full column merely to list her offices. She is honorary president of the National Council of Women, and was president of the American Legion Auxiliary in 1923. The appointments made by the Governor of Virginia would fill another column, and they are still being made.

An Inguinal Tragedy

Dramatis Personae

QUEEN HERNIA
THE KINK OF ILEUM
CARDINAL SYMPTOMIS
POLLY UREA

Scene: The Right Lower Quadrant.

Time: The Proper.

The Omentum rises, disclosing Queen Hernia, disguised in Peyer's Patches and a Submucous Coat, seated upon a stool. (Anterior horns are heard.)

Enter the Kink of Ileum wearing the Royal Tunica.

The Queen: How camest thou here?

The Kink: By the elevator, from the ventricular fold to the pelvic floor, so please your majesty.

The Queen: Thou liest! When Polly Urea was feeding the ducts I saw thee hiding in the crypt.

The Kink: Ach Mein Leiberkuhn. (He staggers against the Internal Pillar.)

The Queen: Aha! Thou art the Kink!

The Kink: Aye, every inch a Kink. (Seizing a spermatic cord he strangulates her, tying a Gimbernat. As he sloughs away she breaks down and ulcerates. Cardinal Symptomis rushes in and reads a Blue Mass.)

Senior Class Poem

*Too soon our paths must part!
The trail which we together long have followed
Is ended now too soon, though on that day
When first we started the adventurous journey
It seemed to stretch unending toward the sunset.
Bright were the fields beside the trail with flowers;
From mossy banks within the trees' cool shade
Sprang glistening streams of water; and before us
Tall mountains threatening towered.*

*But always did we hold our goal before us,
Though flowers called, and cooling waters tempted.
Steep were the mountains over which our pathway
Oft led us, but unfaltering we pressed forward.
And, when we gained the crest, ah, what a vision
Before us lay unfolded! Then forgotten
Were trials and temptations and privations;
And larger mountains that arose before us
Loomed smaller in our sight.*

*Too soon our paths must part!
But, though they part, the journey is not ended;
New trails stretch forth toward that far distant sunset.
We must press on; our footsteps must not falter;
We must endure until we reach the end.
And when new obstacles arise before us,
And other paths endeavor to divert us
From our original course, we shall remember
Those happy days together, and take courage,
And memories of that guide who walked beside us,
Directed us, and strengthened us, and taught us
The secrets of the trail, shall be forever
Within our hearts enshrined.*

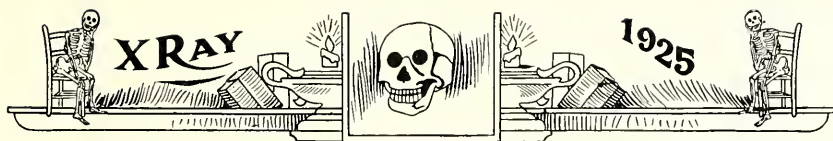

*Comrades, arise! For distant lands are calling;
Mountains, and plains, and, at the end, the sunset.*

ATHLETICS

Athletics at M. C. V.

DURING the past two years, in which athletics have been re-established at the Medical College of Virginia, much has been said of what should and would be done in order that our college might again hold that place in the world of sports that it once had, but little has been said of what really has been accomplished. It is the idea of this article to lay before the student body those things which have been done to further the cause.

The establishment of the Athletic Association, composed of members of each class from the three schools, as well as a faculty member from each school, was the first real step made. This adoption was made by the student body two years ago, and the organization began functioning the following year. To further the cause and to give the Athletic Association a substantial backing, a resolution was passed by the student body signifying their willingness to be levied the sum of five dollars as an athletic fee. A constitution was drawn up by the Association governing athletics in general. Despite the handicap of a gymnasium, much was accomplished. Winning teams in basketball and tennis were organized and supported with respective coaches. A baseball team was organized and a coach hired. But the handicap of long hours in school prevented real success in the adventure. However, a start was gotten.

It remained, however, for this year's association to finish up the good work of their predecessors in a more material way by appointing a graduate manager. This, indeed, was a real step toward the goal sought. Dr. Wm. H. Parker, an alumnus of M. C. V., and perhaps one of the best known men in Richmond's circle of amateur athletics, was asked to accept the appointment. The results accomplished under his guiding hand are ample proof of both his willingness and ability. To say that athletics has taken on added life and that we are once again being considered as worthy opponents is certainly more than a promise now.

Each year many letter men from other colleges are matriculating in the several schools. To bring out some of this new material, and to stimulate all the interest possible in the coming basketball season, an intramural basketball league was formed during the past fall. Each class of all three schools was represented and represented well, as evidenced by the many class games. At the end of the league three teams were tied, but it remained for the lowly Freshman Medicos to carry away the cup.

Immediately after this league closed, varsity basketball was begun. Coach "Skinny" Owens was secured to guide the destiny of our team and, judging from their record, his guidance was more than ample. A fast and well coached team was the result, and one of which we are justly proud.

Tennis has, as yet, not been fully organized for the coming season, but with the building of our own courts upon the site of the Old Retreat for the Sick much can be expected. A field house with showers and lockers also is planned. Many of last year's letter men in tennis are back, and many new candidates have already signified their willingness to support a team.

Baseball this spring looks exceedingly bright. Our athletic director already has his plans laid as to coach, fields to be used, and the like. Games have been booked with William and Mary, Hampden-Sidney, Roanoke, V. P. I., Richmond College, and many other nearby colleges. With new material added to the start gotten from last year's experience much can be and will be done.

One of the finest steps toward aiding, not only the course of athletics, but that of each individual student, would be the adoption by the Medical College of required gym work. The Dental School is inaugurating such a step for the coming year. Surely it is a most commendable one.

Gather Round, Greeks, While We Sling the Hammer

PHI CHI—Composed of two battalions, Pi Mu and Phi Chi. The "lost battalion" hasn't been found. It's noted for its "clean" house, alumni, and loss of political power. It has a few good fellows and hopes to obtain more with the passing of the Class of 1925.

PHI RHO SIGMA—These are the good boys who know no women nor love no drinks, but sometimes they wander from their secluded nest to the Wilds of South Third. Founded by Hippocrates, we think it's been going ever since.

PHI BETA PI—The Speed Boys, who run a ranch on West Grace Street for entertainment of Grace Hospital nurses. It was first called "Alfalfa Club," but later and gradually has become "citified." It's noted for its week-end dances and good looking girls. It was founded when mythology was in its youth.

OMEGA UPSILON PHI—Filling station for the Y. M. C. A. Founded at Monte Carlo. They still live up to the ideals of the founder, but are handicapped by the late Dr. Volstead. They are noted for their exclusiveness and extensive training in the Mexican Art.

CHI ZETA CHI—The controlling political party on account of their many cliques and popularity. They entertain royally in their handsome East Franklin Street home, and initiate on the jolly green banks of the James.

PHI DELTA EPSILON—Founded by the three wise men of Jerusalem. Like their founders, they believe in kôsher, pig, wine, women, and so on. K. K. K.s barred. We are expecting great things of Phi Delta Epsilon.

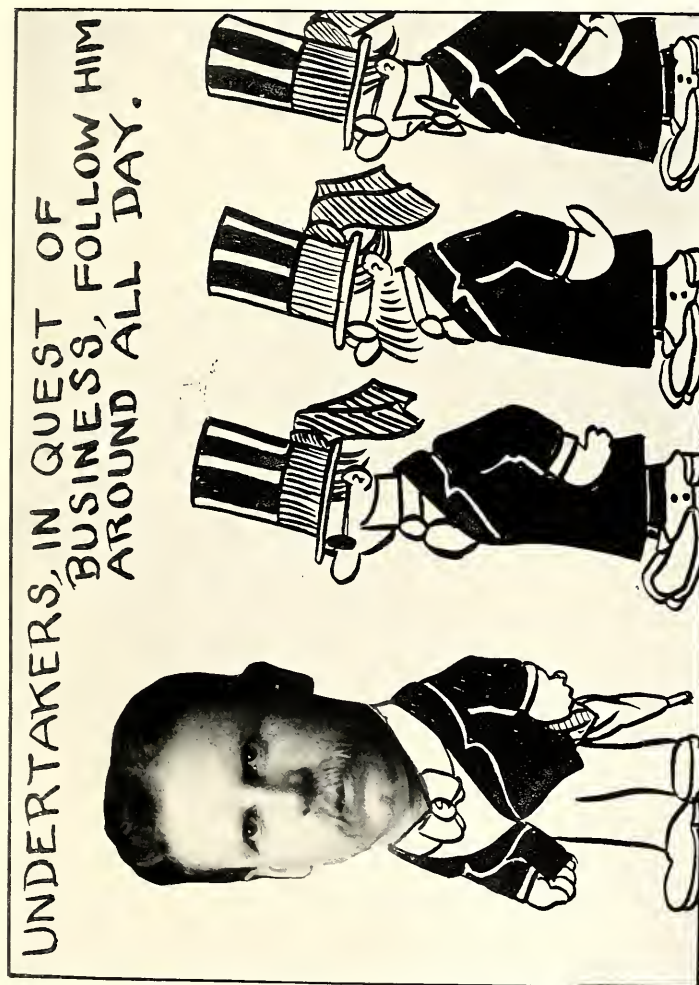

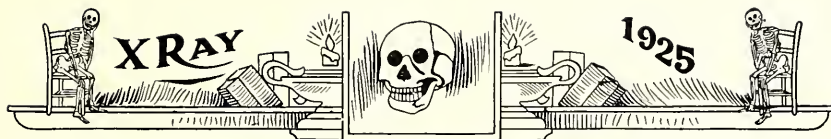

PSI OMEGA—Founded by the village blacksmith of iron bands. The great Mouth Mechanic. They have been great jaw-breakers ever since.

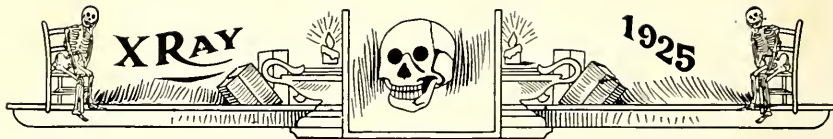

XI PSI PHI—Founded by Adam the day after Eve was created, and have been pulling bones ever since, both from the oral cavity and otherwise. These boys solicit members from Galax to Hong Kong.

ALPHA EPSILON IOTA—Composed of "Zippers" and she-Medicos. Ninety-nine percent of these sisters have a batting average as high as a gnat's ear. We think it's due to their moto: "Less necking and more shows."

KAPPA PSI—Founded by "Jim" Albert and "Doc" Hughes—composed now of M. C. V. drug store cowboys and the rest of Dean Rudd's good looking students. Recently, their alumni tried to obtain a mandatory injunction to force all members to join the Y. W. C. A.

ZETA DELTA CHI—These are the strong competitors of the aforesaid drug store cowboys, both in spirit and accomplishments. They have founded the famous "Murphy Campus" of M. C. V., and boast as well of a thought-to-be palatial mansion on West Franklin Street.

Much has been said, and properly so, of the material side of the Medical College—the college and hospital buildings combining to form the finest medical institution in the world, the marvelous equipment, the completeness of the institution as a place of medical education. Much, also, has been properly said of the high standard of medical teaching, the faculty comprising, as it does, many men of national and international reputation. But from the student's standpoint, nothing affords quite so much pleasure and gratification as the spirit of fellowship that exists between the faculty and student body. We believe that in no school is there evidenced a more sincere and friendly desire on the part of successful teachers and practitioners of medicine to become definite factors in developing good physicians. They are easy of access on any subject pertaining to student life. We know of no instance, regardless of time and place, where faculty members have not been willing and glad to give advice and assistance to groups or individuals of the student body who came to them. Every opportunity is given to the student to make his medical course as profitable as possible. No student is denied personal contact with his professor. And as we know them better our respect and regard for them is increased. Being closely associated with successful medical men who embody the highest ideals of the profession provides great incentive for successful and well-directed effort.

As medical students, we favor co-operation, co-ordination, coadunation, coaptation—anything, in fact, except coeducation.

We are not going to make the customary apologies for this year book. We admit, without hesitation, that it has a few shortcomings. Many things could have been added to increase its excellence. No doubt, numerous mistakes have been made in its compilation. Perhaps, here and there, names have been omitted. For these and other things we are sincerely regretful. But we did the best we could. This is the first of its kind in Richmond. (In fact, only a few of the very large medical schools of the country attempt a publication of this kind. With these we invite comparison.) So we have had no standard other than our knowledge that "nothing is too good" for this school. The responsibility has rested entirely with one class of the college. The work has been done by a few individuals. We have been handicapped by inexperience, limited time, and a multiplicity of demands incident to preparing ourselves to become worthy members of the great body of alumni of the College of Medicine. We were told that a volume of this kind could not be successfully published. But we have succeeded beyond our expectation, and in presenting this book to you we take a certain amount of pride. We feel that it is worthy to represent the school.

In recent years there have been established in many of the leading medical schools of the country Student Medical Societies, which have developed into important and valuable adjuncts to the student's education. The purpose of these organizations is to band together certain groups of students, regardless of fraternal or other affiliations, who are interested especially in some branch of medicine, in order that the subject may be given more intensive study than is provided in the curriculum of the college. Ordinarily, a professor of that subject is chosen as patron, and the society is named in his honor. Meetings are held once or twice a month, at which time original papers are presented by students and discussed in open meeting. Discussions are also held on articles appearing from time to time in the medical literature. The patron of the society attends the meetings and acts as moderator in the discussion.

We feel that there should be such societies in this college. It is certain that the faculty would co-operate in their formation. We urge the student body, upon their return next September, to inaugurate such a plan in this institution.

Nott-Shott

A duel was lately fought in Texas by Alexander Shott and John S. Nott. Nott was shot and Shott was not. Hence, it was in this case better to be Shott than Nott.

There was a rumor that Nott was not shot, and Shott avers that he shot Nott, which proves either that Nott was shot notwithstanding.

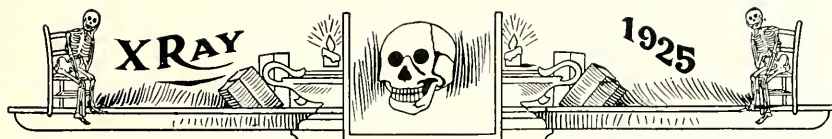

Circumstantial evidence is not always good. It may be made to appear on trial that the shot Shott shot shot Nott, or, as accidents with firearms are frequent, it may be possible that the shot Shott shot, shot Shott himself. Then the whole affair would resolve itself in its original elements, and Shott would be shot, and Nott would not be shot. We think, however, that the shot Shott shot not Shott, but Nott, anyways it's hard to tell who was shot and who was not. Maybe both Nott and Shott were half-shot to begin with.—Richmond Collegian.

She: But aren't you going to kiss me?
 He: Yes.
 She: But why are you taking off your shoes?
 He: Honey, by the time I get through my feet are going to have grown so much these shoes would give me bunions.

Some Far off Day

When you are rearranging your bookshelves, you will run across this college annual and experience the thrill of happy days recalled. By that time success will be yours, with the high ambitions of your student days an actual accomplishment.

While you are thus looking back at the things that have influenced your career, we cannot but hope that Ritter Cooperation may share in your remembrance. We would like to feel that you, too, had obtained constructive aid from our book, "Ritter Practice Building Suggestions", offered free to every graduating dental student.

Better still, we would like to know that Ritter Dental Equipment had helped you to express your skill and to gain the rewards your ability deserves. Therefore, we will deem it a privilege if at all times you will freely ask our assistance, and thus give us the opportunity of building another enduring friendship.

AMERICAN CABINET No. 120

Steel
Drawer
Bodies

One Piece
White Glass
Medicine
Closets

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and attempts have been made to imitate this cabinet. It is unique and original and far ahead of anything else in dental cabinets.

Sheraton and Chippendale were in advance of their time in the art of cabinet making, and our No. 120 Dental Cabinet has an air of the future that is hard to deny.

American Cabinet No. 121—This is the same as No. 120, except that it has wood drawer bodies instead of steel, metal-lined white enameled medicine closets instead of glass and chipped glass in doors.

American Cabinet No. 122—Same as No. 120, except that it has wood drawer bodies instead of steel.

Terms—Our goods can be combined with other equipment such as chair, unit, engine, etc., and purchased on one contract on easy monthly payments.

WESTBROOK SANATORIUM

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

The magnificent suburban home of the late Major Ginter, by alterations and extensive additions, has been transformed into a private institution for the treatment of nervous diseases, mild mental cases and select alcohol and drug habitues.

The grounds are ample, quiet is assured, and a new building for men makes easy separation of sexes. A number of cottages make possible satisfactory and congenial grouping.

Rooms single or en suite, with or without private bath. Hot water heat, electric lights, artesian water. Bowling, tennis, croquet, billiards and a gymnasium afford recreation. Electrical and Hydrotherapy equipment. Nurses and attendants trained for this special work. Four physicians reside in the Sanatorium and devote their entire time to the patients.

PRIVATE ROOMS

Private rooms with accommodations for one, two, three and four patients have been provided. The charges for general board and care are from $3.75 to $6.00 per day, which includes general nursing care, the services of the Resident Physician and the House Staff, bacteriological and pathological examinations, medicines and prescriptions compounded in the Hospital Pharmacy and surgical dressings.

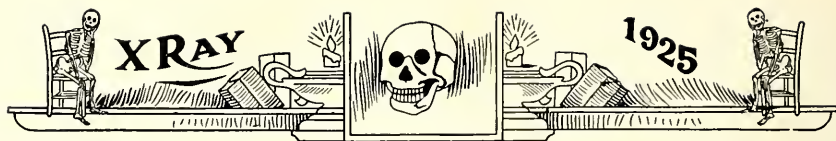

Other charges for ambulance service, the use of delivery and operating rooms and X-Ray examinations are reasonable.

All reputable physicians and surgeons in Richmond have full privileges (including the use of the operating rooms) to treat patients occupying private rooms in any of the hospitals.

PUBLIC WARDS

The charge for patients in the Public Wards is $3.00 per day which is in full for all examinations and service necessary, there being no extra charges.

The privilege to treat patients occupying beds in the Public Wards is restricted to a group of physicians and surgeons appointed by the Executive Committee of the Board of Visitors, selected from the Faculty of the School of Medicine of the College. Physicians and surgeons do not receive a fee or any emolument for services rendered by them toward patients.

The Management of an Infant's Diet

From the Laboratory of
Mellin's Food Company
FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

Based upon recognized standards of average weight of normal infants during the first year of life, babies who are fed upon modifications prepared from the directed quantities of Mellin's Food, whole cow's milk and water, as suggested for normal infants one month old to twelve, will receive daily for each pound of body weight the four essential elements of nutrition in the following average amounts:

- 1.75 Grams of Fat
- 2.01 Grams of Proteins
- 4.98 Grams of Carbohydrates
- .48 Grams of Salts

This well-balanced nourishment also supplies fuel for the generation of bodily heat, as the stated amounts of fat, proteins and carbohydrates contribute 45 Calories for each pound of body weight. Mellin's Food modifications may therefore be depended upon to furnish necessary energy as well as food elements in proper proportion and amounts to meet the requirements for repair, growth and development of early life.

SCIENTIFIC not EMPIRICAL

Remove the Antiphlogistine dressing at the end of twelve hours and examine it. The center will be wet provided there is an inflamed area beneath it; an outer zone merging into the center will be moist, and the part which has covered healthy tissue will be comparatively dry.

In the outer zone the blood is flowing freely and uninterruptedly, through the underlying vessels, forming a current directed away from Antiphlogistine. Its liquid contents therefore follow the direction of least resistance and enter the circulation through the physical process of endosmosis. In the center zone there is stasis, no current tending to overcome Antiphlogistine's hygroscopic property. The point of least resistance for the liquid exudate is therefore in the direction of Antiphlogistine—exosmosis is going on in the zone, hence the excess of moisture.
